when he was taken in custody a week after the outbreak, his accusers were not to be found. Genna was conscious when the police reached him. He refused to reveal the identity of his assailants. "If I get better, I'll get them myself," he repeated in answer to the questions of the officers. Angelo Genna, whose way in the west side's valley gang for several years was the hand into a closely organized beer running and bootlegging clique, fell before the guns of rival desperadoes about two months ago. Early in June a band of his followers, led by Michael and bent upon avenging Angelo's death by a police car in their path, and immediately opened fire. Two officers were killed and a third wounded. Michael was killed, Tony escaped and two of his henchmen gave battle to the surviving officers. Both were wounded and a week later were indicted for murder on two counts, naming the police as their victims. Their case was postponed indefinitely at the preliminary hearing upon plea that feeling over the slaying might prove prejudicial. A fourth occupant of the car was identified as Tony Genna, the third brother and victim of today's outbreak.

A silver ring bearing the initials "A. H." doubtless that of Angelo, the first of the pair to fall was found on Michael's hand when he was slain. The same ring, passed on with a second oath of revenge was found on Tony's hand today.

YOUNG BRYAN ATTACHED TO SCOPES CASE

He said the court decision had brought about a confused situation in New York municipal affairs involving "continued study and conference."

Bryan Defines Evolution.

Dayton, Tenn., July 8.—(A. P.)—William Jennings Bryan's definition of evolution is "guesses strung together."

Mr. Bryan, here to take part in the prosecution of John T. Scopes for violating the Tennessee law against the teaching of evolution theories in the public schools, so defined evolution last night in an address at a banquet in his honor.

The defendant and the former secretary of state chatted in the hotel lobby where the banquet was served before the dinner and Scopes sat directly across from the speaker. Mr. Bryan, in his address, said that proprietors forced him to confine his remarks to a restricted discussion of the pending case but he was emphatic in his declaration that "the people will tell the weather what to teach." This case, he thought, would give final and definite determination to this right.

Defends Statute.

In discussing the law, he said, he thought the people in legislatures everywhere, he asked, "does the death penalty prevail in this state?" Before his question could be answered, he added: "I know that it cannot apply in this case."

Much of the address was devoted to defense, an opposite role to that scheduled for the speaker for violating the Tennessee law against the trial before Friday. He defended Dayton and its citizens, legislators and to the people of Tennessee.

"I will put the character of the people of Tennessee against that of any other people in the United States," he said.

Attorneys for the defense today expressed the belief that in his address Mr. Bryan definitely had renounced his reaction to the case.

PLANT FOUND ON ISLAND IN WILLAMETTE

tion of having no definite knowledge that the men were engaged in illicit liquor operations, or had committed any crime whatever.

Wage Leads to Plant.

The agents, led by a boat, jumped into the river and swam across an inlet which separated the island from the main land.

Landing on the island they were pushing around through the brush when one of them stumbled over a wire, which proved to be a signal wire leading to a bell at the still, installed for the purpose of warning anyone at the still of the enemy's approach. Following this wire led the agents to the layout.

The quarters had been elaborately arranged to do business on a big scale. A regular loading dock had been installed with apparatus to slide kegs down into rowboats. Evidently a shipment had gone out but a short time before the raid was made, as the agents found the bins under the still going to put on a not a hot run. The agents estimated the still to have a capacity of 300 gallons in a 24-hour run. However, but about seven or eight gallons of whiskey were found in a keg, and about 40 gallons more in report barrels in the plant. The 35 vats containing corn mash and sugar were all practically filled.

Equipment All New

The stills were evidently nearly new and agents figured the plant probably had not been operating much more than three weeks. The stills themselves were asbestos covered. The two steam boilers were new as was the bulk of the apparatus in use.

Officers feel satisfied that these stills were installed under the operation of Mr. Angel and have a theory that these are but a part of a number of enormous stills working in various parts of Oregon and Washington outside of Portland and dumping their product into the Portland market.

Officers are still to state how or where they received the tip that there was a still in the vicinity. The agents early this morning notified Sheriff of the capture of the still and Deputy Sheriff Roy Bremner and Bert Smith went to the scene to guard the still.

The agents went into Portland to interest Federal prohibition Director Livville in the capture. The officers had not yet determined whether the island on which the still was captured lay in Marion or Yamhill county, because of the meanderings of the river at the point and government maps failed to answer the question. Consequently to obtain jurisdiction if any arrests are made it may become necessary to shove the case through the federal courts, they say.

Cannot Be Moved

The deputy sheriff stated that it will probably be exceedingly difficult to get the still and paraphernalia off the island as the water along the island edge has become exceedingly shallow, so shallow it would be difficult to get a barge in there would float apparatus of such great weight as the boilers and stills, although it is still possible to carry out whiskey in rowboats. The officers believe the apparatus was installed during a high water period but that actual distilling operations did not start until about three weeks ago.

Agents from the Oregon office, who effected the raid declare that they have had no sleep for over 48 hours, as their search for the supposed small still was a continuous one leading up to late yesterday afternoon when they sighted the men on the island. They kept vigil all last night after the still was discovered, as they declared they had received threats from certain quarters if such a still was located they would be "bumped off."

7 STORY FALL TAKES LIFE OF BARONESS

Investigation, said it was believed she had fainted.

Jewels Jarred Loose The young woman was elaborately gowned and jeweled. Her diamond earrings were dashed from their settings in the fall and were recovered from the roof by detectives.

Miss Susan Wilson, the baroness' companion, with whom she arrived at the Ritz Carlton June 26, said they were to sail for Europe in the Hibernia today and that last night the baroness gave a farewell party.

Besides the baroness, Miss Wilson and Thompson, the party included Lester Conly, connected with a Fifth avenue concern. The two men told the police the party of four had dined at the Ritz Carlton together. Later they went to the baroness' suite.

Leaned From Window Miss Wilson left the room and after she returned a few minutes later she saw the baroness who had slipped into the apartment and was gone about 15 minutes.

When she came back she went into the living room and leaned out of the window, remarking that it was very hot.

Thompson said all three saw that the baroness was falling. Miss Wilson screamed and the two men ran to the window and plunged out of their hold and plunged out of the window, Thompson said.

An investigation of the district attorney's office reported to District Attorney Blanton this afternoon, after two hours questioning of the two men who were in the room with the baroness when she fell. Mr. Blanton announced his office would drop further investigation.

Mrs. Wilson explained the accident and two great grandchildren. Her body will lie in state at Webb's funeral parlors Wednesday until 5 p. m. Funeral services will be held Thursday at 11 a. m. at the Portland crematorium.
