SPECTATORS FILL TINY COURTROOM TO OVERFLOWING

G. H. West brought in a bunch of flowers and placed them on the judge's desk. They were rhododendrons, sent by friends from Laurel Falls.

At 8:45 few seats remained untaken and the entrance and stairways were crowded. The attorneys and the defendant were slow in arriving. Rules were lacking for controlling the entry of spectators. Judge Raulston indicated that regulations to check the overflow would be perfected.

Dudley Field Malone of defense counsel, followed by Scopes, Darrow, Hays, Newland the dfendant's father, entered at 8:50 and took seats at the counsel table.

All the principals in the case passed through a group of photographers at the entrance to the courthouse grounds. Judge Raulston, with a Bible and a dictionary under his arm, posed for them for several minutes.
