The plate now used has the Washington abbreviation stenciled on the end of the plate. The new plate has green background with white numerals. The 1926 Oregon plate will be of black background and white numerals.

ELKS WILL HOLD DRESS PARADE HERE TO NIGHT

The final dress parade of the Salem Elks will be held on the streets of Salem this evening, giving the people of the city an opportunity to view the organization, and giving the Elks an opportunity to perfect their line of march before the big parade at the national convention in Portland Thursday.

The local lodge will present a colorful appearance with a band of 20 pieces, a drum corps of 28 pieces and about 350 members dressed in bright new uniforms obtained especially for the occasion. The band will be dressed in blue and white, the drum corps in blue and yellow and the rank and file of the parade in purple and white.

In order that visitors who view the parade at Portland may get an idea about the features of Salem, banners will be carried setting forth some outstanding points about the city. Lyman McDonald, drill captain, and Frank Durbin, Jr., lieutenant, are in charge of the parade. Oscar Steelhammer is director of the band and Carl Higgins is drum major of the drum corps.

Line of march for this evening's parade has been announced as follows. Form on Liberty street, one block back of Elks club, march on Center to Commercial, on Commercial to State, on State to High, on High to Court, on Court to Cottage, on Cottage to State, on State to Waverly, on Waverly to Court and on Court to Liberty.

Members of the local lodge have hopes of bringing home one of the prizes offered at the grand parade Thursday.

STATE AGENT ARRESTED IN LIQUOR PLOT

(Continued from Page One.) to the officers and framed in Christensen, a deal being made between the two whereby Christensen was to reveal Mr. Angel's cache to Moore, Moore was to get the liquor and split the proceeds with Christensen.

It is alleged that late Saturday night they went to ranch of C. E. Kerr, two miles south of St. Paul on the river road. A number of federal officers, an officer from the office of State Prohibition Director Levine and some Portland policemen trailed the pair. When the two were driving out of the ranch the arrest was made and the liquor seized. Christensen was landed in the federal ward of the county jail, without bond, his star being taken from him.

Two special officers, A. C. and R. W. Smith, who aided Christensen in getting the still at St. Paul and also the still at Mt. Angel, made the declaration while here the day following the St. Paul raid, that a man named Moore had negotiated them on the streets of Portland threatening them with dire result if they continued to prowl about in the St. Paul neighborhood. They had suspected this Moore of being well advised as to the St. Paul still.

"STOL" Old Offender

Also a man named Moore, following the seizure of the Mt. Angel still and arrest of a number of alleged employees in it, appeared on the scene of the still the following day with an attorney and it was this Moore that arranged for bail for the men, putting up in the neighborhood of $19,000.

It is charged that the same Moore was a few years ago charged with implication in a $29,000 robbery of the Sells-Floto circus at Vancouver, Wash. He was later apprehended and charged with the crime along with an alleged accomplice, was tried three times and finally acquitted. "Sometimes fishy somewhere," is the comment of local officers on the arrest of Christensen.

In the first place, Christensen was due here today to appear as a witness in the case of the state against Walker, in connection with the Mt. Angel still arrests, and also as a witness in the cases following in which the same still was involved. According to reports he is being held without bond in the federal ward of the county jail just when he is needed here to give his testimony against men, whom it is declared, have been released on bail through money put up by Moore, charged with framing Christensen to cause his arrest by federal officers.

Christensen used to be a federal officer, it is stated, and had blood in his veins, a charge between him and other federal officers. On top of that Christensen has been a moving spirit in coping out two of the biggest stills yet captured on the coast, which has not got well with some of the other prohibition officers, it is said.

Politics Abolished

Upon appointment Mr. Finley declared that all of his actions would be governed for the best interest of fish and game welfare and that a condition of his acceptance of the position was that politics would be eliminated and he be given a free hand in conducting wild life. The appointment, he said, was not solicited or sought, but requested of the governor by sportsmen of the state.

Mr. Finley is well known throughout the country as a naturalist, author and lecturer. He is best known in Oregon for his interest in the protection of wild birds and animals.

In 1911 Finley crafted the first law which created a fish and game commission in Oregon. As governor at that time, he was the legislator who was the first member appointed by the governor and served as the first chairman of the new commission. After the commission was organized, Governor West and the four members asked Mr. Finley to take the position of state game warden and carry on the executive work of the commission. Serving a term of four years in this position, he resigned because he wanted to devote all of his time to educational and scientific studies. A new position of state biologist was created for Mr. Finley and in this capacity he served the state for another term of four years.

Mr. Finley is the author of several books and over a hundred magazine stories of wild bird and animal life, as well as articles on the conservation of natural resources. His collection of over twelve thousand still life photographs and nearly two hundred thousand feet of motion pictures is considered the most unique and complete natural history record ever made. This material has been used in his lectures in all parts of the country and has helped in many ways to advertise Oregon.

For many years Mr. Finley has been associated with the National Association of Audubon Societies for the protection of wild birds and animals. He is the president of the Oregon Audubon society, a position held for nearly twenty years. He is on the editorial staff of Nature magazine, which is published by American Nature association of Washington, D. C. It was largely through Mr. Finley, who was a personal friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt, that the president is issued several special executive proclamations creating four federal wild fowl reservations in Oregon, Malheur lake, Klamath lake, Cold Springs and Three Arch Rocks reservation. Mr. Finley is a member of the advisory board of the migratory bird treaty act, appointed by the secretary of agriculture to work out the federal regulations for the protection of migratory birds. He is also a director of the National Conference on Outdoor Recreation called by President Coolidge, and is a national director of the Isaac Walton League of America.
