The Northwestern river steamer now routed between Portland and Brentana, 18 miles below Salem on the Willamette river, reached Portland last night, successfully completing her first round trip on her new route. The boat is expected to keep up with her daily schedule between Brentana and Portland for several weeks, by which time it is hoped to use the route all the way to Salem, government officials having given assurance that the channel will be opened by that time. Fred Karr, head of the Salem Navigation company, estimates that the Northwestern is practically breaking even so far as the finances of the new system are concerned. Trucks are used to bring the freight from Brentana to Salem.

CHAMBERS URGED TO HELP FARMERS

Portland, Or., July 17.—During the morning session of the north-west regional agricultural conference under the auspices of the United States chamber of commerce, the conference stressed the importance of chambers of commerce organizing either through bureaus or committees for work in aid of agriculture. In large cities, the idea was that the work should be conducted through bureaus and in small cities through committees.

Bankers, merchants, shippers and farmers or men having direct interest in farming should have charge of the chamber agricultural work and in charge of a bureau there should be a man specially trained for the position.

Opinion of delegates was unanimous that business organizations should work closely with the state agricultural college, the United States department of agriculture, local and state farmers organizations and county farm agents in aiding the farmer to place himself on a substantial basis. Above all else, it was emphasized, that the membership of a chamber of commerce should be absolutely in sympathy with farm welfare.

FIND HATS OF SPANISH EXPLORERS IN OLD MINE

Yago, Nayarit, Mexico.—In the famous old Cucaracha (Cockroach) mine, near here, recently rediscovered after being hidden for a century and a quarter, miners are bringing up evidences of the Spanish padra who once owned these approaches to rich veins of gold.

One of the discoveries was a large felt hat, in a remarkable state of preservation. It resembles pictures of the headgear worn by Friar Tuck, of nursery fable fame. It has a very broad and floppy brim and was made of a fine grade of thick hair felt, colored brown. Despite its burial for more than 125 years, its fibers still are strong and appear equal to any used in modern hats.

The workmen have found also portions of blankets and garments, showing fine material and weaving. The texture of these articles is far superior to the crude Indian or Mexican weave of the period, and this is regarded as certain evidence that the owners were also conquerors who brought the stuff from Europe.

PARIS, LONDON SWAP TELEPHONE OPERATORS

London, Eng.—Paris and London have begun exchanging telephone girls in relays for periods of two weeks in each city. The English girls will work in the French central offices, and at the same time the French operators will be employed at this end of the wire on the long distance lines. The idea of the officials is to give the girls a working knowledge of the two exchanges, and the method of routing calls, in addition to cementing a personal "entente cordiale" which is designed to make easier the working of the cross-channel exchanges.

The official language on the Paris-London line is French exclusively. Most of the English girls on the board here have been educated in France, and all speak French fluently.

To the Editor: In the Thursday's issue Dr. Slaughter states he has his troubles about evolution and the Bible and bids for help along this line. Now his writer may not be able to help him any at all. He will say this, that for 25 years he has read everything in search both pro and con upon this matter of evolution which just now is taking so much attention. He has read many of the standard books on both sides, magazine and newspaper articles and has come to certain conclusions.

Now if the doctor is interested enough and should have "a convenient session" some time he might call at 1018 6th street West Salem and we will talk over the matter and see what we can do.
