ZIELINSKI TRIAL DRAWS CROWD OF GOSSIP MONGERS

Standing room only and that at a premium was evident in Judge Kelly's department of circuit court this morning when the curtain raised on the trial of Raymond Zielinski, charged by Helen Ganlard with being father of her child. The courtroom too was a gaily colored affair as a heavy percentage of the crowd was made up of women and girls, while among the male part of the attendance were many youths, probably not out of their teens.

This same trial packed Justice Small's court a few months ago to such an extent that the crowd blocked up the hall and wound out onto the stairway.

The nature of the charge and the fact that the defendant Zielinski is a man of some prominence in his own country, Hazelgreen, are evident reasons for the intense interest manifested. In the lower court Zielinski was found guilty of the charge before a jury, although the action is in the nature of a civil process.

The charge is lodged under a statute of 1917 and as far as known it is the first time it has been tried out in the courts here.

Under the statute action may be brought against the alleged father of an illegitimate child and judgment secured permitting the child to take the father's name and forcing the father to support the child. This is the nature of the action now before the court.

The private prosecutor, Helen Ganlard, did not sit with her attorneys in the courtroom this morning, but took the rather unusual step of sitting in the crowd with some relatives. In examining the jurors her attorney pointed her out to the jury and this resulted in a craning of necks on the part of the crowd.

In justice court the witnesses examined for the defendant included Mrs. Ray Lick, Edith Craig, Henry Girod, Mary Schleg and Pauline Schleg, while on behalf of Zielinski the witnesses were Francis Ganlard, Robert Dean and Helen Ganlard. It was stated that many more witnesses will appear today and in all probability the trial will drag out to some length.

The Ganlard family is well known in Salem, the father having been a painter around the city for some years.

"PLENTY DOING" AT BOYS CAMP

"I'll say there is a plenty doing al the time," writes Irving Hale from the Y. M. C. A. camp at Neskowin, where some 65 boys, most of them from Salem, took up camp last week. "We got here Thursday afternoon and things began to start right off the bat. We all lined up and was assigned to a tent. We had to first stake all the pegs and clean the grounds then we made our beds.

"There is 5 or 6 boys in each tent and a leader. I and John Bone sleeps together and he snores like a Ford muffler. Our leader is Mister Hiday. He makes us clean up in front and behind the tent and make our beds like they does in the army.

"They has the best eats I ever et in my life. Last nite we had for supper roast beef gravy, wheat bread, butter, applesauce, mashed potatoes and cocoa. It certainly made me feel like a prizefighter.

"Ed Cross played a game of horseshoes with Tom Kay, who is at Neskowin. Mister Kay may know how to run the state but he can't play horseshoes to beat Ed Cross. I guess not.

"We go swimming in the ocean and I'll say it is some pond and you can't see across.

"Must close as we got to eat. I wont miss that for nothing.

"Very trooly,
"Irving Hale, Tent No. 6."

lie in state upon the lawn of the Richard Rogers home, where he lived during the Scopes proceedings and where he died unobserved by man. As a guard of honor on this occasion, while the mountain folk of eastern Tennessee pass before the casket, a squad from the Fred W. Brady post No. 100, American Legion, composed of Dayton former service men, will be on duty at the afternoon ceremoney. The guard will be in uniform and without arms.

The children of the dead leader have been summoned by telegraph by their mother to join the party in Washington. The son, William Jennings Bryan Jr., left Los Angeles for the east today. Mrs. Ruth Owens left Mount Vernon, Ohio, for Dayton today but will divert her course so as to reach Washington before the body of her father. Mrs. Richard Hargreaves, the other daughter, is with her brother traveling east.

The decision to bury the former democratic chieftain among the country's military great at Arlington, was the result of the expressed wish of Mr. Bryan, his widow told friends here. Mr. Bryan was a colonel of volunteers in the Spanish-American war.

A huge spreading maple tree shades the spot where the files of friends will look for the last time upon the face of their beloved champion. In this grassy eminence, raised four feet above the level of the street, Mr. Bryan was wont to sit and rest during the intervals of the fight over the Tennessee anti-evolution law. Here he chatted with his friends and grasped the hands of hundreds who had come from the Cumberland slopes or from distant cities to witness the noted legal controversy in the Rhea county court.

155 INDICTED IN TRUST CASES

Chicago, July 27.—(AP)—New indictments against 155 corporations and individuals in the furniture cases in which the government charges violations of the Sherman anti-trust act, were returned today in federal district court.

The addition of many individuals connected with the associations of furniture manufacturers and the re-indictment of many corporations would permit of imposition of jail sentences upon conviction of the individuals, as well as assessment of fines of the companies, it was explained by Roger Shale, special assistant to the United States attorney general.

The corporations named in the new indictments were those manufacturing dining room and bed room furniture who were named in the original indictments, returned several weeks ago and failed to appear and enter pleas of guilty.

COMMONER PASSES AWAY WHILE ASLEEP

few minutes. After an examination, the doctors said Mr. Bryan probably had been dead 30 or 45 minutes before they arrived.

The commoner had been living under a strenuous program since he came here three weeks ago to assist in the prosecution of John T. Scopes, found guilty of violating Tennessee's anti-evolution law. He appeared in excellent health, however, and was planning to launch a great campaign this week in behalf of fundamentalism.

Mrs. Bryan, who has been an invalid a number of years, bravely stood the shock of her husband's unexpected death. She immediately took charge of funeral arrangements and received a few of the hundreds of persons who called at the residence to express sympathy.

"I am happy that my husband died without suffering and in peace," she said.

His last words to her, as he entered the room for his nap, were: "I am so sleepy."

Before he went to sleep, Mr. Bryan autographed two books for Judge John T. Raulston, who presided at the Scopes trial. The books were "The Seven Questions in Dispute," and "In His Image." He wrote:

"To Judge and Mrs. John T. Raulston, Winchester, Tenn., with the good wishes of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bryan, July 26, 1925."

One of the books was open when physicians reached the room and the ink was not dry.

After traveling over two hundred miles Saturday and delivering speeches at Winchester and Jasper, Tenn., Mr. Bryan returned to Dayton early yesterday morning from Chattanooga, where he had spent the night.

Before he left Chattanooga, Mr. Bryan joined A. W. Lessly, owner of the hotel at which he stopped, and several others for breakfast. Mr. Lessly accompanied him to Dayton and during the trip the commoner expressed his determination "to see the case through." Mr. Bryan showed no evidence of bad health, Mr. Lessly said, but remarked that he was suffering with diabetes.
