WILDEST BOOM AT ROCKAWAY

SCHOOL BOOK MESS UP TO VAN WINKLE

There has been irregular. This Churchill denied.

Churchill holds that the commission has no legal authority to meet on August 20, while the commission is unanimous in the opinion that the emergency gives the commission that authority.

Only War Out.

Prior to the meeting of the commission it was apparent that about the only thing the commission could do to solve the text-book problem in Oregon was to allow the "gentlemen's agreement" entered into between State Superintendent J. A. Churchill and the text-book publishers to take the place of contracts.

The reasons for this are Governor Pierce's veto of a bill passed by the 1925 legislature empowering the state board of education to enter into contracts at the best possible prices, the fact that the text-book commission has no authority under the law to make contracts, and the impossibility at the present date to adopt new books and be able to get them for the coming school year.

Under the law the contracts must be made by the state board of education, which is composed of the governor, the secretary of state and the state school superintendent.

The "gentlemen's agreement" between Mr. Churchill and the publishers whose books are now in Oregon schools at as low a figure as they are sold in any other state, or at which they would have agreed by contract had contracts been made.

Governor Pierce took the position that by "standing pat" the state superintendent would have been able to get the books at prices contained in the old contracts and that to allow the bill passed by the legislature to become a law would have been a surrender to the "book trust."

The members of the text-book commission are Milton A. Miller of Portland, George Hug, superintendent of the Salem schools; R. T. Tanner, superintendent of the Dalles schools; A. C. Hampton, superintendent of the Astoria schools, and Mrs. Marjorie Delsell Newbury of Medford.

Musical selections chosen by Mr. Lau before he died were also rendered on the phonograph. The deceased left a list of names of friends whom he wanted to attend the funeral. All others were excluded.

coups or legal action. Tinning requested the sheriff to send a deputy to Walnut creek to stand guard over it.

Joe Rodriguez, a Portuguese, missing since noon of last Thursday, the day of the explosion may have been slain and his body placed in the laboratory after having been mutilated to prevent identification.

Detectives representing an insurance company in which Schwartz carried a large policy are aiding in the investigation.

Sheriff H. R. Veale has broadcast a description of Schwartz and an order for his arrest on a murder charge.

A. J. Nielsen, a dental expert, who had worked on Schwartz's teeth declared after a minute examination of the charred body found in Schwartz laboratory that "this man is not Schwartz. The teeth vary widely from Schwartz's teeth."

Schwartz carried $150,000 in life insurance.

Joe Rodriguez, a laborer, has been missing from the Walnut creek district since the explosion.

District Attorney A. B. Tinning announced today that he had withdrawn permission he had given to Mrs. Schwartz yesterday to proceed with the funeral of the body which she insists is her husband's.

"You can announce that Schwartz is wanted for murder," the San Francisco Examiner quotes Tinning as saying. "This body is positively not Schwartz. I have asked the sheriff to broadcast a request to sheriffs and chiefs of police to find Schwartz."

The police were informed today by two women, whose names were withheld that they had seen a man running from the vicinity of the Pacific Collodion laboratory just after the blast. The women, who were walking home at the time but who were not together, told similar stories, although neither was able to identify the man who ran from the plant as Schwartz.

As he passed under a street light with averted face, they said they observed that he wore a straw hat and a blue suit. One of the women said she tried to halt the man to ask where the explosion had happened but that he refused to stop.

H. M. Day, secretary of the company, which was managed by Schwartz told the authorities that three or four days prior to the explosion Schwartz had given his wife and E. S. Bell, an attorney, two sealed envelopes to keep for further instructions. Mrs. Schwartz declined to discuss this report referring questions to Bell. Bell declared that the report was unfounded.

SALEM YOUTH WINS CONTEST IN FANCY DIVING

Julian Burroughs, resident of Salem and student at O. A. C., returned to this city from Seattle Saturday, having won fourth place in the national contest in fancy diving held there last week. He competed against some 20 entries from all parts of the United States. All three of the divers who placed ahead of him were holders or former holders of national and Olympic titles.

Pete Jardine of Miami, Florida, who placed first, won second in the Olympic games, losing to Al White, who placed second in the contest at Seattle. Last week was the first time White had been defeated in three years. Clarence Pinkerton, former world champion diver, placed third. Burroughs placed ahead of numerous fancy divers of national and international repute, such as Dave Fall, Ira Benjamin, Louis Balbach and others.

Burroughs successfully defended his title of fancy champion. He led in the north west diving until one break put him out of the running. Some of the judges rated him second instead of fourth in the low diving, but an extremely low rating by one judge brought his average down. He was sent to the contest representing Multnomah Athletic club of Portland.

Incidentally Burroughs had the misfortune to step on a nail during the contest causing his foot to bleed. Immediately before every dive it was frozen with ether. Returning to Salem Saturday he had no complaint to make regarding the incident.

"Conditions for the meet were ideal," said Burroughs. "The diving took place in the canal that connects Lake Union with Lake Washington. It was the first diving contest ever held when every diver, his every dive, always had one of his dives missed at least one. It was the closest contest held in years."

In the swimming contests, which Burroughs did not enter, several world's records were broken. The low diving was done from a board 10 feet above water.

The meet was the first national one of its kind ever held in the northwest.
