CLARK'S DEATH FOLLOWS UPON THAT OF WIFE

Chicago, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Affection which bound the lives of Charles W. Clark, well known concert singer and teacher, and his wife, reached across the void of death last night. Two hours after Clark fell fatally ill in a motion picture theater, Mrs. Clark collapsed and followed her husband in death.

The double tragedy came while the famous baritone and his wife apparently were in robust health and the best of spirits. Apoplexy was assigned as the cause of Mr. Clark's death.

Last night they sat together viewing a motion picture. Without warning Mr. Clark sank in his seat. Mrs. Clark tried to rouse him, but physicians, hastily summoned, found he was dead. Throughout the ordeal Mrs. Clark remained calm and self-possessed, but when she reached home she gave way under her pent-up sorrow. Physicians tried to revive her but she was beyond hope and within a few moments she died.

Mr. Clark who won fame as an interpreter of modern song married Jessie Hunter at their home town, Van Wert, Ohio, in 1888 and she had been the close companion of his successful career. During the period that Theodore Thomas conducted his orchestra, now the Chicago Symphony, Mr. Clark was a soloist on various programs from 1905 to 1906. Of late years he had been devoting most of his efforts to teaching at the Bush Conservatory of music.

He was born in Van Wert, Ohio, in 1862.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark are survived by three children, Ronald Clark, a teacher of singing in Paris; Mrs. Virginia Lawrence, New York and Mrs. Louise Gardener of Chicago.

French Tanks Rout Rifles in Hill Strongholds
Fez, French Morocco, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Several French flying columns well supplied with tanks, having carried out operations on a large scale with the object of cleaning up the northern and western regions of the battle area where the Rifian tribesmen have been filtering through in large numbers recently and making raids on isolated villages and farms.

The enemy was attacked in the Assien range, where he was strong by entrenching. Completely taken back by the tanks the Rifians abandoned the position and fled in disorder, leaving sixty dead on the ground.

These operations have had a salutary effect throughout the Quezzen region, to the northwest of Fez. Elsewhere is little activity. Colonel Girard, who played a distinguishing role in the fighting in the Taza region has been wounded by a bullet in the spine and taken to the Taza hospital. His condition is satisfactory.

Ahd-el-Krim, who is directing the operations of the rebellious Rifians, has made good his promise that he would soon be in possession of airplanes for use against the French. Several planes are reported to have been landed at Rifian headquarters but it is said by French that some little time must elapse before they can be in operation. It is said that a German aviator a veteran of the world war will be in command of the Rifian planes.

TEXT BOOKS TO BE ADOPTED BY OPEN COMPETITION

The state text-book commission, which met here yesterday to unscramble the Oregon text-book snarl, added a few more knots to the snarl and left the situation more confused than it was before.

The commission expressed itself quite clearly on what it thought ought to be done, but this proved to be contrary to law as interpreted by Attorney General Van Winkle. It then voted to go ahead in spite of the law and let the books be settled in court. But no provision was made as to how the case shall be carried to court. In addition to all this, the supreme court, where the case would have to go, is now on vacation and will not convene again until September, so no opinion from that body can be expected early enough to clear the situation by the time the schools open.

Ignore Van Winkle.
The action that was taken in the face of the attorney general's contrary opinion was a vote to meet on August 20, when approximately two-thirds of the Oregon text-books will be thrown open for adoption on competitive bids from the publishers, and directing State School Superintendent J. A. Churchill to notify the publishers of the meeting. Milton A. Miller of Portland, who was elected chairman, said this would furnish a basis for court action, but the route to the courts was not outlined. Presumably it was believed Churchill would refuse to notify the publishers as a basis of starting a friendly test suit, but after the meeting Churchill said he would notify the publishers.

The way Churchill proposes to notify the publishers is this: He will include in his notification to all publishers in the country a copy of the governor's letter calling the text-book commission together, a copy of the minutes of yesterday's meeting, and a copy of Attorney General Van Winkle's opinion.

No Authority on Law.
The Van Winkle opinion held in effect that there is no authority of law for the commission or the state superintendent to take any action at this time looking to the adoption of text-books. This opinion is based on an act of the 1925 legislature which provided that one-third of the text-books be adopted every two years instead of all of them every six years. Under the 1923 act the commission adopted a third of the books last November, the action being effective June 1, this year. This act of 1925 also provided that contracts on such books as were not covered by the new adoption should continue at the expiration of the six years at the old book prices. But the publishers refused to allow the contracts to continue for the reason that book prices had advanced, and under their terms of contract had they allowed Oregon the books at old prices it would have been necessary to reduce the prices in all other states.

This made it necessary that some action be taken to meet this stand of the publishers, so Superintendent Churchill had a bill introduced at the 1925 session authorizing the state board of education to enter into contracts "at the best possible prices," which would have been as low as the prices in any other state. This bill passed both houses of the legislature, was vetoed by the governor, passed over his veto in the house, but killed in the senate when that body sustained the veto.

Without Contracts.
This left the state without any school book contracts. But it was necessary that a state course of study be prepared as usual. State Superintendent Churchill communicated with the publishers and secured their agreements to furnish the books without contract at as low prices as they would have offered them under contract, and on that basis proceeded to prepare the course of study.

Then came Governor Pierce's letter summoning the session of yesterday, during which Mr.

Miller charged Churchill with having acted irregularly, which Churchill denied. Churchill declared that he had at least protected the parents of school children by making it possible to get books at as low prices as accorded any state.

When the attorney general's opinion was received yesterday the meeting was at a loss for some time as to what to do. A. C. Hampton, declaring that it left each city superintendent at liberty to do as he pleased about adopting books.

Whole List Open.
When the motion was made to throw the whole list of two-thirds open for adoption notwithstanding the attorney general's opinion, State Superintendent Churchill vigorously objected, declaring it would place him in an unfair and erroneous light before the people of the state. He was informed that the commission had no intention to do this.

The motion to call the meeting for August 20 was made by George Lang, superintendent of the Salem schools, and seconded by Hampton.

Hug and Hampton were in favor of some action to protect the members of the commission from being besieged by agents of publishing companies, but no action was taken. A pair of them were waiting for the members when the meeting adjourned.

Resolution Adopted.
The commission also set forth its policy in the following resolution, presented by R. R. Turner of Dallas:

"Whereas, The legislature of 1923 enacted a law which provides that one-third of the school text-books be adopted every two years, beginning with November, 1924; and

"Whereas, No provision was made for the adoption of the other two-thirds of the books, contemplating that the publishers would be willing to extend the life of existing contracts until this remaining two-thirds of the books could be taken up for consideration, as provided in this act; and

"Whereas, The publishers are unwilling to furnish these texts, continuing the life of the contracts except at very heavy increases in price; be it

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting of the state text-book commission that the commission should proceed to adopt in open competition the remaining two-thirds of the text-books not considered in November, 1924, having authority for such action on section 572 of the 1925 edition of the Oregon school laws, which reads as follows: 'If at any time during the six years covering the adoption of text-books as herein provided, a publisher shall fail or be unable to furnish any adopted text-books, or his contract be rescinded, or, for any cause, it becomes necessary to adopt any text-book instead of or in addition to those required by the course of study in force at the time of the regular adoption, the chairman of the board of text book commissioners, or the governor, may call a special session of said board, and it shall thereupon convene and adopt such text-book in the same manner as in this act provided, and the state superintendent shall in such case cause the proper circulars and notices to be sent to the publishers.'

GRAFTED GLANDS AND DEFICIENT CHILDREN

Paris, Aug. 4.—(A. P.)—The Lille correspondent of the Matin says that Dr. Rene Lefort, a member of the academy of medicine, and Jean Piquet believe the grafting of thyroid glands of criminals on backward children have proved successful.

Some months ago these doctors conceived the idea of removing the thyroid gland from the leader of a dangerous gang of Lille criminals after he was put to death on the guillotine and grafting it on a little girl whose mental and physical development was exceptionally deficient. The doctors asserted that the operation can be considered a success. The girl, they say, is in excellent health.

What's New For Fall!

In Coats and Dresses it appears as if the designers outdid themselves this season. Suede finished woollens are being shown extensively in Coats which are either plain or embellished with fur.

Here is an offering that presents wool, silk and satin Dresses, cut along straight lines, with many exquisitely trimmed.

We have always shown a fairly good line of the larger sizes but this year finds us able to take care with a much larger selection than we have heretofore been able to show.
