

CHINESE FIRED UPON BY GUARDS DURING RIOTING

Tientsin, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Following disturbances that lasted throughout the day at a Pao Cheng mill, Chinese police and military fired on riotous strikers wounding several principally in the legs. The trouble was instigated by agitators from Shanghai who are exerting strenuous efforts to spread the strike to Tientsin. The disturbances began Saturday when workmen, mostly Shanghai residents, employed the firing of an engine as the pretext for a strike riot. The mill office windows and furniture were smashed and the American manager, Burton, his wife and family compelled to make hasty retreats from the menacing mob.

Chinese police dispatched protection for the mill but these were withdrawn Monday morning upon settlement of the dispute. Trouble was renewed later in the day, angry strikers parading outside the mill for hours. Police were again sent reinforced by Fenstien soldiers who threw a cordon around the mill.

The rioters tried to rush the cordon and wreck the mill thus compelling guards to fire.

Strikes also broke out in other mills whose employees were intimidated by Paocheng strikers. All day there was a demonstration before the British-American tobacco factory. Leaflets were broadcast urging a strike and causing most of the women workers to walk out. The situation has quieted down.

Eugene, was close to shore when he noticed his father's plight and swam to his rescue. While the frantic mother watched from the beach the lad struggled shoreward with the unconscious form of his father, then leaped into the family automobile and drove madly for town and a doctor. Applying artificial respiration, Mrs. Neimann was rewarded after an hour's fight by seeing the life slowly returning to the body of her husband. His eyes re-opened as the son returned with medical aid. Neimann is the proprietor of an automobile firm here.

CIRCUS MARKETING IS MAN SIZE JOB

Housewives who are lamenting over the high cost of living and the strain of making both ends meet should take a leaf from the book of Alfred L. Webb, chief of the commissary department of Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined shows. These are some of the miracles which re-accustomed athletes and laborers three a day at the average cost of fifty-three cents a meal; keeps so vigilant an eye upon his stock that if one can of tomatoes too much or too little is opened, he wants to know why; has eliminated waste in the kitchen until about the only thing he throws away is coffee grounds. He never failed in thirty years to serve a bounteous meal on schedule time to the circus city, through month after month of one day stands, or whether in New York or Deming, New Mexico.

Webb buys butter by the ton and eggs by the hundred dozens, but knows what becomes of every pound of butter and every dozen of eggs. He knows the details of everything that happens in his flying restaurant in which are ninety-seven employees, thirty-six feet of ranges, a bakery, a grocer and butcher shops, and a cafe tent seating more than a thousand persons at a time.

"The whole secret is system and economy," says Webb. "As an example of the latter I have a bread and butter man and an assistant who do nothing else but watch the tables for untouched and unsold bread which they gather up and serve again. These men save far more than their salaries."

"The bread and meat scraps are collected and cooked up with corn meal into cakes for the dogs and hens. All the bones are boiled down for soup stock, and all the fat is rendered and what is not used for frying purposes is made into soft soap. The coffee and tea dregs are about the only things that go to waste around here and I am trying to find some way of disposing of them."

"Before the circus reaches a city I always have food enough stored up for the first meal, but my dinner and supper supplies and those for the following day's breakfast are always purchased locally. There is also an emergency store which contains canned meat, ham and a sufficient supply of other edibles to insure a meal in case of a delay in receiving supplies."

If as Napoleon said, "an army travels on its stomach," so does a circus. The importance of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey commissary is shown by the list of daily purchases made by Webb. The list is as follows: Six thousand five hundred pounds of meat, 2600 to 2500 pounds of bread, 350 pies, 100 layer cakes, jelly rolls, nearly half a ton of butter, 500 pounds of sugar, two and a half barrels of flour, 120 pounds of lard, 250 pounds of coffee, 15 pounds of tea, 50 bushels of potatoes, parsnips, carrots and cabbages, 200 gallons of canned vegetables such as corn, peas, beans and tomatoes, 80 gallons of fresh milk and three cases of evaporated cream.

The great combined circus traveling its wonders on 100 double length railroad cars will come here to exhibit Saturday, August 23.

LEGION NINE TO PLAY TONIGHT IN CORVALLIS

The American Legion, winners of the twilight league championship, will go to Corvallis tonight to meet the Corvallis champions in a return game. The Corvallis players won from the locals last week in a hard fought, extra inning game.

Several additions have been made to the Legion lineup and they are going to Corvallis to take them into camp and even things up. The Legion ought to have won the game last week but errors proved costly, all but one of the four scored by them being unearned.

The players are to meet at the Hauser brothers sporting goods store at 3:30 according to the announcement made yesterday afternoon by Paul Acton, manager
