There was another break at the prison this afternoon," said Fry. "The institution is a dangerous place for employees to work, and is a menace to the community."

James Hawthorne, employed in the flax plant at the prison, said that the discipline in the camp was very satisfactory and that the prisoners did whatever they were told.

William Fisher, prison gardener, said seven months ago, and C. A. Kuykendall and Steven Layendar, guards, all testified that in their estimation the discipline at the prison now is satisfactory and as good as they ever have seen it.

Summary of Testimony Briefly summarized, the testimony submitted to the jury at the hearing by the various witnesses was about as follows:

That the four convicts escaped through a hole in the roof and dropped into the yard at about six o'clock in the evening when the rest of the convicts were in the dining hall.

No check was made to see what prisoners remained in their cells when the others passed into the dining room, or why they remained there.

That Murray, Willos, Kelly and Jones were all in their cells when the count was made when the men came in from the yard at 5:30 o'clock.

The hole in the roof, made by boring 70 holes through the boards and tin and chiseling it out, could not have been made in less than an hour.

guards that friction existed between the warden and deputy warden, and bets were even made as to who would win out.

That measures of discipline taken by subordinate officers had been countermanded by the warden.

That gambling goes on among the convicts with the knowledge of both the governor and the warden.

That convicts were constantly gaining ground in their efforts to dictate the policies of the prison, some of the guards and employees even going to the length of declaring that the convicts run the institution.

That upon occasion of a riot in the cell house, when the convicts demanded that the radio be turned on, the warden ordered that their demand be granted, although the deputy warden had ordered that the radio be turned on only two nights a week.

That men placed in the "bull pen" for punishment by the deputy warden and principal keeper had been released by the warden.

That most of the guards are only "CARD OF THANKS"

While there were half a dozen or more guards off duty in the guard quarters just outside the yard, there were no arms available for them to use in such an emergency.

That the fugitives had to run across more than a quarter of a mile of open ground after they left the protection of the walls near tower No. 2, but not a shot was fired after them, nor was any pursuit started for nearly an hour.

That there were two automobiles and at least one driver in the prison garage just across the street ready to go when the break started.

As to conditions existing at the prison at the time of the break and prior to it, nine guards and other employees testified that discipline was very lax, and that the guards were constantly expecting such a break and talked about the lack of discipline frequently.

Several said it was common knowledge among the convicts and average, or very poor shots, and that only two or three of them can be termed good shots.

That the religion, fraternal affiliations and politics of applicants for jobs at the prison are determining qualifications.

That the warden has cautioned his guards to be careful not to make the convicts sore for fear that they will burn up the flax or do other damage about the penitentiary.

No trace has been had of the second man. A brother to the Bingham called on him at the hospital and was held for a time by Portland police, but eventually was released after questioning.

Bingham himself contended that he received his wound in an altercation with another motorist near St. Helens, stating that they engaged in an argument over right of way and the shooting followed.

Bingham's movements in Portland were traced for sometime before the Stauffer assault and as far as the officers could learn he had been engaged in no occupation, although he is said to be a logger.
