60 PERCENT OF 1925 CALIFORNIA PRUNES UNSOLD

Robert C. Paulus returned last night from a business trip to San Francisco reporting that it is estimated there about 60 per cent of the 1925 crop of prunes in California is still unsold. Under a deal between the prune association and private packers the private packers bought about two-thirds of the association's expected output, which in turn have been put onto the market by the packers. On the other hand private growers are reported to have sold comparatively few of their 1925 prunes to anyone and as the prune association is estimated to have about 50 per cent of the state's total output, it leaves about 60 per cent estimated unsold.

Dried Fruit Advances
Dried apricots and peaches have seen marked advances in price and this is causing the private holders to hang on to their prunes with the expectation of the dried prune going the same way.

It is estimated by packers and exporters in California that while the Oregon crop is from 25,000,000 to 40,000,000 pounds under last year, the Russian crop, which last year had 15,000,000 pounds will go as high as 55,000,000 pounds this year. However, the Russian dried prune crop is reported to be almost nil, and as the manufacture of brandy is one of the largest industries in the country, it is expected that the supply of good prunes will be drawn on heavily there for the brandy manufacturing, and as a result it is possible the situation will not equalize itself in a general way.

The California prune market, itself, Paulus reports, is inactive. The bulk of the old crop is about cleaned up, with a general estimate of from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 pounds being left on hand.

Pear Situation
Paulus also reports that the pear situation in California and Mexico, where he stopped, is at present arousing the most interest in the fruit game. Low prices on consumption and packers who have bought from growers have both been hard hit.

On the other hand canners are unable to take advantage of low prices as they have bought up to requirements in many cases, and cold storage plants are crowded full so they cannot overbuy if they wanted to, as they have no place to store.

Just as Paulus was leaving growers in Lake county, California, where there is a heavy pear average, were to have a meeting to decide whether they would dry all of their pears or ship part of them fresh. Lake county is one of the largest of the pear drying centers of the state.

pistol and fired as Lasseter seized Leahy's arms. The shot struck Lasseter in the throat, causing an internal hemorrhage which brought death soon. A second shot struck Leahy's arm, shattering the upper bone. The former judge then turned and walked from the lobby unassisted. Magee fell sobbing on the floor nearby, lying on the floor nearby, died within a few minutes. A coroner's jury was empaneled immediately, viewed Lasseter's body in a local morgue and at the request of the assistant district attorney adjourned until 9 o'clock today when Magee was expected to be present with his attorneys, R. H. Hanna and Fred Wilson, both of Albuquerque, who represented him in the libel and contempt cases here last year and in July 1923.

Simmons admitted to the police that he and other members of the party had been drinking and he is being held for investigation.

Albert Rixe, owner of the car and one of its five occupants, was also probably seriously injured, it was reported this morning, although his injuries were at first considered slight. Rixe was riding in the rear seat alone, but the other four had been crowded into the front seat.

MURRAY SAYS STORY OF ESCAPE HE SIGNED TRUE

let them out on the west side. "Did you go to Hood River that night?" was the next question. "I felt asleep and don't remember," the young bandit retorted. Then with an impatient gesture— "What the hell difference does it make? You can't believe me. I'm a cold blooded murderer and a crook and a thief, and anything I say will probably be used against me."

Under heavy guard he was transported to the Portland police station, where he was seated on a long bench. "I remember this bench," he grinned. "I sat on it two years ago."

Police easily recalled the time. Murray was arrested here following the Florence bank holdup, in a residence on the east side by a detail of police headed by Captain Moore and Detective Goltz.

"We want a little talk with you, Tom," said Captain Moore. Refuses to Betray Pals.

Goltz urged the youth to tell the hiding place of Kelly and Wilcox, whom Captain said Murray let in White Salmon, Wash., yesterday.

"They may go to your mother's home, Tom," he said. "They may think they would be safer there than anywhere else. And if they get there, and the police found out about it, there'd be a fight. You know that. And your mother might get killed. You wouldn't want that to happen would you? You'd better tell us where they are."

"Now, listen to me," retorted Murray. "Listen to me. Didn't Wilcox kill a guard who was ready to shoot me? Didn't he save my life? I'd be a rascal — to spill on him, wouldn't I? I'm not like the bird who stooped on me and you know it."

"Not even if I hang," he added. "Do you think Eva Saurman told on you when you got arrested before?" he was asked.

"She got me where I am now."

ESKIMOS USED AS RED AGENTS

Nome, Alaska, Aug. 22.—The Soviets of Siberia are courteous to traders but use the native Eskimos of the region to enforce license regulations, R. S. Pollister, agent of a Nome trading company, just returned from Siberia, related here yesterday. The Russian government stationed at Whalen has issued instructions to the Eskimos that any vessel captured by them without a proper trading license should be seized. The cargo becomes the property of the captors as a prize for their activities.

Sixty cases of scurvy occurred at Anadyr last winter with several deaths, Pollister heard. The prevalence of the scourge, it was stated was due to the scarcity of supplies at the soviet government stores at Anadyr. No other stores are permitted in the region and no trading is allowed by outsiders. This rule does not apply in all other districts of northern Siberia, however, and although Pollister's company has discontinued trading posts in northern Siberia, a concession has been granted by which the company is allowed to trade along coastal points with a motor-ship.

Legitimate traders have no friction with officials, Pollister declared, and are given universally courteous treatment.
