The question of the fees lances cutting in on the business of local realtors came up for discussion at the meeting of the Marion-Polk county Realtors association this noon. Local men have been known to secure buyers for property in and near Salem, and accept commissions for selling it, when they did not hold regular realtors' licenses. It was stated that the practice is contrary to state law, but no definite program was suggested for prosecuting law violators.

SHENANDOAH BROKEN INTO FOUR PIECES IN STORM

various portions of the ship fell. Each portion of the ship was completely wrecked by the impact with the ground and early arriving souvenir hunters were splashing off with bits of the bag, splinters of wood and other portions of the mechanism. A volunteer guard finally was thrown around the debris and a request wired to Columbia for 50 men and three officers for guard duty.

Bodies Assembled.
At Belle Valley, where the bodies of the dead men were being assembled under direction of Lieutenant Commander Charles R. Entschendahl, grief prevailed. Villages, the drab routine of their existence interrupted about almost almost unable to comprehend the catastrophe. Soon after word of the disaster reached here the local American Legion post sent out a guard of honor and the veterans stood watch over the remains in which the bodies were taken.

Due to the early hour at which the accident occurred, there were few, if any, who witnessed the breaking up of the great craft. Alarm first was taken when the ship, reported ever Wheeling, at 1:45 a. m., was not seen over points further westward on her course. Desperate efforts were made to locate her, but to no avail and the last word known to come from her crew was a cryptic radio message picked up by the wireless operator at Port Hayes, Columbus, which said only "I am losing my seat."

Parts Scattered.
Shortly afterwards word was received here that portions of the dirigible had crashed near Avon. This was checked to newspaper articles in Columbus and soon every wire leading into the isolated community was busy with calls from those seeking details of the disaster.

For some time it was impossible to learn where the other portion or portions of the craft had descended. Then word finally came from Sharon, 10 miles south of Avon, that another section had crashed there, after drifting almost 100 miles in the storm which broke the ship asunder. Those who reached the scene first were confronted with a wreckage and an undetermined number of dead and injured. Frantic calls brought rescue workers, but it was hours before it was possible to gauge accurately the seriousness of the catastrophe so far as loss of life was concerned.

Out of a total of $396,421 loaned by the state board of control to eastern Oregon farmers to reseed and frozen on last winter, nearly half, or $193,421 has been paid back, according to figures on the board's record. It is considered significant of an improved farming condition in the state that every loan paid back has been paid in full with the exception of two loans in Morrow county that have been partially paid. A survey in the several counties indicate that the state will be repaid every dollar. All payments are due by January 1 next and no further loans are authorized. As fast as the money is repaid to the state it is turned back to the World War veterans' state aid fund and reinvested in securities.

Several carpenters and common laborers who are employed in the construction of the new state training school for boys near Woodburn appeared before the state board of control today and protested against an alleged short payment by Settegren Brothers, the contractors, for overtime labor.

Under the contract between Settegren Brothers and the state it is specified that double pay per hour shall be allowed for overtime. This also is the state law covering the case. The workmen allege that they are being allowed only straight time for overtime. Some of the workers, they said, were allowed time and a half for a while, but that this has ceased now.

The board will summon the contractors to hear their side of the case. The workmen were instructed to submit claims to the board.

The board voted to allow an increase in salary to the matron and head nurse at the state tuberculosis hospital from $109 to $125 a month and to allow the employment of a carpenter for the institution at $75 a month. Dr. G. C. Bellinger, superintendent, also requested that he be authorized to employ a bookkeeper, but this was deferred.

BIG PAGEANT IS TO BE FEATURED AT CHURCH MEET

Professor Robert Moulton Gatke of Willamette university and Professor W. H. Hartzog of the Kimball school of theology spent yesterday in Portland and all day Monday in Eugene completing the preliminary plans for a great home missionary pageant. The presentation of the pageant, entitled "The Light of the Trail" is to be a large feature of the Oregon conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at its annual session to be held in Eugene the last of the month.

"The Light of the Trail" has been written specifically for presentation in the northwest and portrays the coming of Christianity to the Oregon country. The entire cast of 175 characters includes Jason Lee and other early missionaries, besides many modern characters of loggers, sailors, foreign people and college students, who help to depict the influence of the church in the progress and development of the northwest.

Professor Gatke having had two years of successful experience in such work in Foundry church, Washington, D. C., has been asked to take entire charge and direct the pageant. His past experience insures the success of this venture and doubtless many Salem people will plan to attend the presentation.

mood against further guarantees, made a statement in behalf of the Tumalo district, going back to the time of its first promotion by the Columbia Southern company. This company sold lands to settlers, but the project failed when the dam sprung a leak. Thereafter a reorganization was effected, an appropriation of $450 was appropriated by the legislature and the state undertook settlement of the project, water being obtained from another source. Because of the state's part in the project Kay believed the state was still under a moral obligation to the settlers and moved that the additional guarantee be allowed. The vote was unanimous.

Although it turned down the Silver Lake application for an additional year interest guarantee on $275,000 bonds, the board accepted the proposal of Colonel E. R. Pice that he attempt a reorganization of the district by persuading the bond holders to assume the responsibility.

Eagle Point district, which already has a 3 1/2 year guarantee on its $400,000 bonds, asked an additional year and a half. Lone Pine asked two more years on its first issue of $95,000 and 2 1/2 years more on its second issue of $94,000, to take up the five years in each case.
