Business in the United States is "due for a slight recession," is beginning about next spring. It was declared this noon by Charles J. Webb of Philadelphia, owner of a number of wooden mills in the west and a mill at Millto. Mr. Webb spoke briefly before the Salem Rotary club at the luncheon today. "Business conditions since the war have been very 'jazzy,'" he said, "you can break anything, whether it's a steel bar or a business establishment, by forcing it up and then down often enough. Business men at present are trying to prevent violent 'inflation.'" Building in large cities, such as Los Angeles, has come to a halt. Mr. Webb declared, with more space available than there is demand, building of small houses in smaller communities is going on actively at present, but is due for a slump by next spring, which will mark a slight business recession until building starts up again.

While coming to Turner Tuesday morning, the car driven by Mrs. Albert Savage, left the road and turned over in the ditch, near the tabernacle grounds, pinning Mrs. Savage under it in the mud and water. The Savages have recently moved into the old Edwards ranch, formerly occupied by E. S. Fox, located about two miles from Turner on the Marion road. The car was brought to Hall brothers garage for repairs.

HARD LABOR FOR DRUNKEN MOTOR DRIVERS ASKED

Aldermen Hal D. Patton and Paul Johnson are preparing to introduce at the next meeting of the city council an amendment to the drunken driver ordinance that was passed Monday night, whereby persons convicted under the ordinance would be compelled to serve the city at hard labor instead of to be in jail. The theory behind the proposed amendment is that it would be more severe punishment.

Patton severely criticized the ordinance while it was under discussion Monday night, but voted for it. In the course of the argument, City Attorney Kowitz declared that the police judge now has authority to sentence offenders to hard labor if he so desires.

Police Judge Poulsen's idea is that a hard labor clause in the ordinance would be impracticable for the reason that a sufficient number of offenders never are sentenced to make hard labor sentences a paying policy for the city. Further, he points out that an additional meal would be necessary every day for the prisoners, which would be an expense to the city.

The ordinance passed Monday night differs from the one previously in effect in that the new ordinance is exacting what the state law. It provides for a minimum of 60 days in jail, fine ranging from $100 to $500, and suspension of the driver's license for a year.

Defense attorneys announced that the conviction would be appealed.

Kelso, Wash., Sept. 23.—(A. P.)—Facing three charges of malicious prosecution, A. Ruric Todd, deputy mayor of Kelso, Wash., last night acted as prosecuting attorney in the hearing of George Norris, whom he had formerly accused of murder in connection with the death of Thomas Dorey, Kelso editor, who was in jail here today. He declared that he would be present tonight at an adjourned hearing of Norris, "if they don't hang me or take a shot at me."

Three warrants were served on Todd after the conclusion of the hearing at Castle Rock last night. He produced bonds in two cases and was taken into custody of the sheriff pending the production of bonds on the other warrant. Todd and Norris occupied adjoining cells this morning.

The hearing of Norris, which was conducted by Justice of the Peace W. H. McCoy in the high school auditorium at Castle Rock was marked by a demonstration when Attorney Tom Fluke, representing Norris, denounced Todd and accused the court of conspiring with Todd. There were cries of "fine him, Judge, put him in jail," from members of the Todd faction in the court room. Justice McCoy rapped for order and reminded the crowd that the hearing was a serious matter.

A fist encounter in the improvised court room between two women representing the Todd and anti-Todd factions, was the most marked outbreak in the tumult attending the hearing.

There were about 1,000 persons in Castle Rock for the hearing, most of them from Kelso. One could not determine which side was in the majority.

When the hearing opened, prosecuting Attorney Hilo Innes of Coville county, stated that he had no knowledge of any evidence upon which to base the charge pending against Norris, and agreed to let Todd act as prosecutor. Objections were raised to this by Norris' counsel on the ground that Todd was not an attorney but Innes said such proceeding was legal in a justice court.

Todd then produced several witnesses, but no evidence already brought out at the inquest and published in the newspapers was adduced. Fluke moved that the charge be dismissed, but Todd objected saying that he had more witnesses, and asked for postponement until Wednesday night. This was finally agreed to by the court.

ceded. The degree of staff effort to attract capital in the industry and stimulate interest in aeronautics is best set forth by the result of the department's recent bids for private conduct of eight new mail routes.

"We received 19 bids coming from 13 different companies and individuals. Some of them were perhaps informal. Some of them may and probably will be rejected for obviously good reasons, but they have been made in good faith and represent a real purpose on the part of the bidders to undertake the service.

"On September 31 we advertised for four routes for bids which will be opened November 21, 1925. All these routes connect up with the transcontinental route.

"Attention of the New York-Chicago night route shall not be omitted. A special night service is now being given between these two cities. Westbound the ship leaves Hadley field at 9:30 p. m., arriving at Maywood field, Chicago, at 5:45 a. m. They leave Chicago at 7:30 p. m., and arrive at Hadley field at 6 a. m.

"By means of this service a letter mailed at the close of the business day in either New York or Chicago will be delivered at the other end of the route on the first regular city carrier delivery of the following morning.

"The opportunity for savings to banks and business firms afforded by this service is very great. The service is growing in popularity.

"It was established the first of last July and is now carrying an average of over 200 pounds a day in each direction. One night last week we required two planes to carry out of New York a load of over 500 pounds.

"At the rate of our receipts for the last week it is fair to estimate that they first receipts on these two services for the year will be about one million dollars.

"The department has done this at obvious disadvantages. It has been compelled to rely for the most part upon planes originally received from the army surplus, since which time we have either built new or remodeled our own planes at the Maywood shops.

"I do not hesitate to say that we have never yet had a plane that is really suited for our purposes. To carry mail to good advantage a plane must be specially designed for the amount and distribution of weight to be carried, the distance at which it can take off, the rate of speed at which it can be landed and various other considerations of importance.

"We have recently invited proposals for specially designed planes and if our hopes of success in that line are realized we can do even better than we have in the past."

There and evidently started to double back toward Salem, although search of the road in various directions failed to reveal his whereabouts.

Police Are Notified After he had assisted the boy to free himself from under the car, the broad wagon driver went on. However, pondering on the confession of the boy that the police were after him, he notified the Salem police of the incident 40 minutes after it happened.

Officer Hickman went to the scene and later Deputy Sheriff Sam Burkhardt and Southern Pacific detectives also went out. Further search was made today to see if more of the loot could be recovered.

Officers believe that the boy was not alone in the robbery, that probably when the car turned over his idea started to remove the loot from the car, but were scared away by the approaching broad wagon, leaving their companion to shift for himself. It is thought the boy was wearing one of the pairs of high top boots stolen from the store.
