LOCALS

The charter for the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which was organized in Salem 5 years ago, has just arrived here from headquarters at Kansas City, Kan., it was announced today by A. P. Rutherford, departmental commander of the organization. The charter was made out at the time the local post organized, but was misplaced and never received at Salem. It will be presented at the next meeting of the Salem post. The meeting, which was to have been held tomorrow, has been postponed on account of the regional meeting in Oregon City, to which a number of members from Salem are expecting to go. The party leaves the armory here at 6 p. m., transportation being furnished.

The river steamer Northwestern had progressed as far up the Willamette river as Rice's bar, immediately below Keizer, late this morning, and was "lining over" at Rice's. The boat left Portland Saturday in an attempt to make its run up to Salem. Labor Exchange bar, located practically at the city limits of Salem, is regarded by river men as one of the worst bars the Northwestern will have to go over. It was expected to reach the bar by this afternoon. The river's level has fallen one tenth of a foot since the steamer began its trip.

Actual net cost of the machine shop operated at Salem high school was estimated at $527 per year by E. E. Bergman, head of the shop, in a speech before the Salem Kiwanis club at its luncheon this noon. Last year the total amount paid out, including everything, was $2306, he stated. With receipts derived from work put out by the department, plus $1000 received from the federal educational board, enough money was taken in to bring the actual cost down to the amount indicated, he said. The shop is operated primarily, Mr. Bergman stated, for the benefit of boys who ordinarily would not benefit by the other courses offered in high school, and who do not intend to go on to college. Defining education, he declared that its "fundamental purpose is to develop whatever natural endowments the child may have." He stated that a student graduating from the machine course at high school here is "able to step into any well regulated machine shop as a competent machinist."

HOTEL ASKS COUNCIL TO CURB NIGHT NOISE IN NEARBY STREETS

morning, and not far away is a motorcycle shop where a dozen or so motorcycles sputter and roar without regard to the time of night in a nearby alley ply the trucks of a creamery, running at very early morning hours, and equipped with all kinds of horns, sirens and whistles that are always blown before a truck emerges from alley into street. She also protested at the kind of language used by some of the truck drivers.

The mechanical calliope at Otto Klett's dancing and swimming emporium that runs bang up to 12 o'clock was also hit. Hotel guests don't care for it.

Mrs. Linn's remarks led several members of the council not only to endure her objections, but to call attention to other things that they considered nuisances. Alderman Rosebraugh could see no necessity for boys carrying newspapers to awaken the city prior to 8 o'clock Sunday mornings by shouting their papers in the residence districts. Alderman Purvine leveled a verbal shaft at the Southern Pacific company because of the noise its trains make going through town, and Alderman Fred Williams said he was getting tired of the blinking and flashing of electric signs over the doors of Salem places of business. There are so many of them, he averred, that they are no good for advertising purposes because no one notices them, and he thought quiet signs would do better service.

ask the death penalty, fighting even against a jury recommendation that would carry life imprisonment.

Affiliation with the defense of Miller R. Hayden, justice of the peace at Bandon, Oregon, and a former resident of Salem, as associate counsel was announced in court this morning.

That the monotony of the examination of jurors and the constant repitition of questions concerning the death penalty and life imprisonment is wearing on Murray was evident to observers in the courtroom this morning. Yesterday he was composed and scarcely moved a muscle all day, but this morning he displayed marked nervousness, constantly shifting about in his chair and moving his hands.

Yesterday Murray smiled frequently, but this morning his face was expressionless except when allusion was made to his participation in the robbery of the Boerner home. Then he smiled as though really amused. His father and mother again occupied front seats just outside the rail and followed every detail of the proceedings closely, but neither made any display of their emotions.

LLOYD JURY COMPLETED; TRIAL BEGINS

the road. When the clothing was removed at the morgue one bullet fell out of the clothing. It had pierced the body entirely and was lodged in the man's shirt and coat. The second bullet was plainly visible under the skin after almost piercing the body. The third caused only a flesh wound and was the one which pierced the windshield. The two bullets were introduced as evidence.

Keeney also testified to the finding of a watch on the person of the victim, seven dollars in currency in his shirt pocket and four and a half dollars in loose change in his right front trousers pocket. The blood stained clothing worn by Baun was also shown in the court room and identified by Keeney.

The physician who made a physical examination of the body at the morgue, Dr. O. D. Butler, said that the slight wound on the head was not a fracture and not a serious wound.

Other incidental witnesses introduced by the state were the photographer who took pictures of the scene of the crime, C. H. Hoy, brother in law of Richards who was with him when the body was found, Nelson Anderson, neighbor of Mrs. Lucas living also a short distance from the scene of the murder. Anderson also testified that he heard a car go by between nine thirty and ten.

At two thirty this afternoon the defense had exercised eight of its peremptory challenges of jurors and the state four.

Other witnesses yet to be examined by the state are Francis Gallo way, district attorney of Wasco county, who took Lloyd's confession after his apprehension at The Dalles, and the two O. W. R. and N. special agents, Kelly and McCloskey, who caught him in the railroad yards.

Rapid progress was made Monday afternoon in the examination of jurymen in the murder case of W. R. Lloyd, charged with killing Clint L. Baun of Independence. When court adjourned at 6 o'clock 30 of the venire had been examined and 12 men had been tentatively accepted.

William W. Harcombe, attorney for the defense, had exercised eight of his 12 peremptory challenges and it is probable that one or two of the jurors passed will be excused before a final selection of the jury is made. District Attorney Helgerson had used but one of his six peremptory challenges and had indicated that he was satisfied with the jury as selected, but might use his challenges should some of the present 12 be excused by the defense.

Of the 30 jurymen examined, not one declared himself to have conscientious scruples against imposing the death penalty. This is considered quite remarkable. A number of the veniremen examined expressed themselves as having formed an opinion on the case through acquaintance with the deceased, Clint Baun, or from discussion of the case. Seven were excused on this ground on motion of the defense.

Tentative Selections.

The 12 tentatively selected before adjournment Monday night were: G. F. Brown, Dallas; Fred Aebi, Suver; E. P. Lefever, Monmouth; G. A. McColloch, Amity; C. E. Dotson, Airlie; Charles Lynn, Dallas; Frank Moreland, Monmouth; W. O. Morrow, Independence; P. M. Ritner, Airlie; G. O Grant, Dallas; C. J. DeArmond, Suver, and A. J. McGowan, Amity.

Lloyd, the defendant, appeared to be entirely unconcerned and self-possessed but followed examination of jurors closely. His demeanor was little changed from his first appearance in Dallas after his arrest.
