3 CONVICTS WITNESSES FOR MURRAY

of the convicts was relative to this point. They all said that Murray was under the influence of the drug on the afternoon of the break, when they saw him smoking it in the "dog house."

Frank Fallon, the second of the convicts to testify, said that Murray smoked merrawauna continually.

"To my knowledge he used it excessively," said Fallon.

Smoked Merrawauna

While all three of the convicts said they had used merrawauna, none of them were able to describe accurately its effects. They were agreed, however, that it had different effects upon different people—that it exhilarated some and doped others. All testified that Murray's demeanor on the day of the break was no different from what it had been upon the two days previous and on other days.

J. V. Starrett, former parole officer at the prison, was called to the stand by the defense to testify as to the effects of merrawauna upon the users and his knowledge of the use of the drug among the prisoners. Starrett said that it was quite widely used among the convicts, and said that he had studied upon the drug, which is derived from the hemp plant, to some extent.

Starrett on Stand

"From my observation the effect of the use of merrawauna varies with the individual. I have seen men totally unable to coordinate their mind and muscles after using it. I saw Murray at times when I thought he was under its influence."

"The only general effect of the stuff that I have ever observed is that it gives the users a tremendous appetite," Starrett said.

Other witnesses called during the morning were Jane Murray, of Fort Blakely, Wash., sister of the defendant, and C. A. Johnson of Seattle, a friend of the Murray family. Both were character witnesses. The morning session was replete with objections of the prosecution dealing with the use of merrawauna and conditions existing in the "bull pen" which the defense sought to bring out through the testimony of the three convicts.

Murray Hears Own Case

After telling his own story under direct examination in a straightforward manner, with little hesitation at any time, and proving a good witness until his own attorney was through with him, Murray did not progress so well under cross-examination. Apparently he damaged his defense.

Murray hesitated at times in answering the questions of District Attorney Carson, often giving the impression that he was inventing his answers. The prosecuting attorney succeeded in bringing out in Murray's replies the attitude of the convict toward law and order in general, and sometimes the prisoner grinned or laughed with a sneering sneer as he answered.

PIERCE ASKS BOTH RAILROADS BE GIVEN PERMIT TO BUILD

Lakeview. He favored standardization of the narrow-gauged road now entering Lakeview from the south and declared that Lakeview should have an outlet to the north, giving connection with markets served by the northern lines and the Union Pacific.

Where a single line of railroad is sufficient I do not believe in duplication of construction, but I do believe that the vast central Oregon country should have rail competition and that competing companies should have joint user privileges with existing companies.

"At present we are prevented from reaching the eastern markets. We need a cross state line. Such a line, if built under conditions and safeguards which will permit the owning companies to freely and actively to participate in western Oregon's entire state."

"I was surprised to see that President Sproule of the Southern Pacific made a statement that Oregon should be divided into exclusive zones controlled by particular transportation systems. This reminds me of historical scenes when conquering heroes divided the world into sections for the exploitation of different hereditary races. As governor of Oregon I am unalterably opposed to the division of the resources of this state into zones for exploitation by any company, person or persons."

The new secretary, a lawyer and business man, is in his forty-seventh year and will be the youngest member of the cabinet. He has served in the national guard and reserve corps, has been an active official of various financial, educational, charitable and recreational organizations, and is the donor of the Davis cup, the most celebrated of tennis trophies.

In selecting his Presidential Cabinet following the recommendation of the republican organization of Missouri and the advice of a powerful group of political associates who contended that the new cabinet place should be allotted to the west or middle west.

The chance wipes out the representation of the president's home state, Massachusetts, in his official family and reduces to four out of the ten the number of cabinet members who have their homes east of the Mississippi river. It likewise presents the unusual picture of two unrelated men of the same family name holding concurrently the title of secretary of state and secretary of war. Dwight F. Davis will sit near the head of the cabinet table, while as secretary of labor, James J. Davis sits at its foot.
