"We have often heard the prediction that with the advent of the newspaper the spoken word would lose its effectiveness, but such has not proved to be the case," Dr. Norman K. Tully, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Salem, told the Salem Rotary club at its luncheon this evening. Dr. Tully's title was "The Art of Public Speaking in a Republic." He stated that in Wisconsin, where he lived before coming to Salem, he had known of 10,000 people turning out on a cold winter day to hear Robert La Follette speak. There are two prime requisites of successful public speaking, the pastor stated, knowledge and earnestness. Prejudice, of which religious prejudice is the worst possible form, is the greatest difficulty which a speaker has to overcome. Illustrating that much can sometimes be said in a few words, Dr. Tully related the anecdote of the man who was asked whether he drank liquor. "What is the business of me, Dr. Tully, I see. Have you any other business?"

The Greco-Bulgarian frontier in the Demirhisar region in Macedonia, northeast of Saloniki, to ascertain the strength and the intentions of the Bulgarian forces, which on Monday fired upon the Greek post near Demirhisar.

Following the attack, at the beginning of which a Greek official was killed and Greek captives were shot as he went with a white flag, a severe fighting raged for nearly 24 hours. It finally culminated in the Bulgarians holding a white flag and the tendering of expressions of regret by the Bulgarian commander, who explained that the firing on the Greek post was due to a misunderstanding.

Bulgarian Version Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 21.—(AP)—The Bulgarian version of the incident on the Greek frontier was given today by the Bulgarian Telegraphic agency.

According to this account, a Greek soldier entered Bulgarian territory near Demirhisar on Monday and wounded a Bulgarian sentinal, who in return fired and killed his assailant.

A large fusillade across the border followed. The firing continued until last night when a Bulgarian officer gained contact with the Greek commander at Demirhisar. The Bulgarian government, the agency says, has proposed an immediate inquiry to fix responsibility.

FINAL EFFORT FOR STEAMER

A final effort is to be made this afternoon to bring the river steamer Northwestern up the river to Salem, it was stated by F. W. Karr, head of the Captain Navigation company, and Captain Cruso of the Northwestern, both of whom went today for the purpose of inspecting the channel as far as the boat's present position.

The Northwestern has been kept just below Keizer for approximately three weeks, it being impossible to bring the steamer on through with the river at its present level without more dredging. The Mathioma, government dredge, has been at work cutting the channel through.

"It was expecting a little too much to expect the river channel to be made passable the first season," said Mr. Karr this morning. "There is a lot of work connected with cutting through all those bars. What has been done so far we have no difficulty in getting through, but there are a number of them that the dredges have not been able to work on yet."

Ballot titles for measures

Ballot titles have been prepared by Attorney General Van Winkle for two hydro-electric measures, one initiated by the Oregon State Grange, through George A. Palmer, state master, and Bertha J. Beck, secretary, the other by the Housewives Council, Inc., of Portland, through Josephine M. Othun, Mary A. Deah and Clara A. Simon.

The measures differ in some respects. The grange measure would authorize the credit of the state to be loaned and indebtedness without limitation incurred by the state in addition to the other indebtedness for the purpose of providing funds for carrying out the provisions of the act.

The Housewives Council measure calls for the creation of the Oregon water and power board of five members and authorizes the issuance of state bonds in an amount not exceeding 8 per cent of the state's assessed valuation, and an initial appropriation of $250,000 from the general fund of the state, returnable from a water and power revolving fund.

Both are proposed constitutional amendments, both look to control of water power by the state.

Tualatin Tunnel Project Voted

Portland, Ore., Oct. 21.—The creation of the proposed Portland-Tualatin valley tunnel district was approved at the special election held yesterday. A total of 1719 votes, or three-fifths of the number cast, was needed, and the project carried with 168 to spare. The complete unofficial figures were: yes 1878, no 973.

Otto Erickson, Beaverton, D. A. Pattullo, and Charles R. Frazier, of Portland were elected directors of the district. They are authorized to proceed to obtain a survey and estimates of cost of the proposed tunnel under Council Crest, which is sought to give quicker transportation between the city and the Tualatin valley, which lies just west of the city beyond a range of hills.

HID IN WOODS 3 MILES NORTH OF SILVERTON

and I did," Kelley said according to Miss Barrett, who also quoted Kelley as saying that he was one last one to go through tower one and that he found Bert Oregon Jones wounded on the outside of the tower as he went over the wall. "Jones fired his last shot there," Kelley was quoted as saying. "He turned around and fired at Guard Holman, who was sitting on the ground, saying 'This is my last shot.' Then he threw the shotgun down and I picked it up."

Cut Hole in Roof as Kelley insisted that he did not use a gun until he picked up the empty shotgun outside the wall. This gun he said he hid under a log in the woods near Pratum.

Kelley's statement brought out that fact that it was he and Willos who cut the hole in the roof of the north cell house through which they made their escape, and Willos confirmed this. "The hole was cut on the afternoon of the day they made their escape while the prisoners were bringing their commissary supplies into their cells. It took about two hours to cut the hole," he said. The brace and bit used he, himself, stole from near the old incinerator plant.

The statements of both Kelley and Willos quoted them as saying that the break had been planned for some time prior to its execution and both denied that there was any idea of killing anyone. They said that the plan was to take the turn key and whatever guards they could get hold of with them as hostages and force their way out of the front gate.

Didn't Know About Guns "None of us knew for sure that there were any loaded guns in the arsenal," Kelley was quoted as having said. "We thought there would be a pistol on the desk in the turnkey's office but it wasn't there."

"I know there was no intention to kill anyone," was Willos' alleged statement.

Willos statement was much the same as that of Kelley, except that he said that Kelley got the shotgun he carried in tower one and not outside. Willos denied that he did any shooting until after he was outside the walls.

"I done my shooting after I jumped from the tower. I fired three shots at random at the garage, but I didn't see anybody over there to shoot at."

CONVICTS EXPECTED TO BE HUNG

the cover of a stiff rifle fire by Jones, who had taken a stand beneath the steps leading to the warden's office.

"Murray, Willos and Kelley stopped behind the oak tree in the yard and Murray and Willos fired on the guard tower No. 1 with revolvers," said Carney. "Then they broke for the tower. At the foot of the stairs leading up to the tower Kelley fell. As he fell I saw that he had a revolver in his hand."

Would Shoot if Necessary, Carney said that the day Kelley and Willos were brought back to the prison he talked with Kelley and that the latter told him that the convicts planned to raid the arsenal, secure guns and take guards with them to use as shields in forcing the front gate or going over tower No. 1.

"Kelley said they did not plan to do any shooting unless their other plans failed," said Carney.

Charles L. Newman, in whose home near New Era the convicts spent one day while they were at liberty, identified the statement dictated to him by Murray and agreed to by the others. The dictation was interrupted by discussion at many points, Newman said. In one case there was a disagreement over who shot Guard James Milton Holman, whose body was found beside that of Jones, Murray contending that Willos killed him.

"How do I know that I killed him?" Newman stated that Willos said.

Defense Plea Shaken, C. Mollenbier, prison guard, who was the first to enter tower No. 1 after the convicts had shot their way through it, said that upon his arrival at the tower he found the body of Sweeney lying on the floor. Outside on the ground, he said, were the bodies of Holman and Jones. Jones, he said, had a bullet wound through his head but was still breathing, and Guard John Davidson, whom the defense has contended shot Jones from above, was in cold blood after he had been wounded, was fully 60 feet away near a sign in the road from behind which he had been shooting.

John Smith, deposed warden of the penitentiary whom Warden Dalrymple succeeded, failed to quib

Be sure you use only the genuine Bayer Aspirin, marked with the Bayer Cross, which can be had in tin boxes of twelve tablets for few cents.—Adv.

There is little indication that the case will go to the jury before the end of the week, although the state expects to rest its case by noon today. The defense has a long list of witnesses to be heard, including four convicts at the penitentiary who have been fellow prisoners of the defendants; Tom Murray, the co-defendant in the case who has already been convicted, and the two defendants themselves.

Called to the stand this morning, M. W. Miller, principal keeper at the prison, testified that Kelley told him subsequent to his return to the prison that in the break they didn't intend to have any shooting unless it "came to a showdown."

Sergeant Craddock, gun expert of the Portland police department, was called to identify the bullet taken from the head of Sweeney as being one that had been fired from the 32-20 revolver taken from Murray at the time of his capture.
