

EDUCATION WEEK PROGRAMS SENT TO ALL SCHOOLS

J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of schools, is mailing a supply of programs for American education week to the county school superintendents, and asking the cooperation of schools and various civic organizations in the proper observance of the week.

"Under the joint auspices of the United States bureau of education, the American Legion, and the National Education Association," says the foreword to the program, written by Mr. Churchill, "every state in the union will celebrate the week of November 14-23 as American education week."

"The state department of education for Oregon is, therefore, asking the school teachers of this state to secure the cooperation of the representatives of the American Legion and of the Oregon State Teachers association in carrying out a program in their respective communities that will bring about a more intensive interest in the work of the public schools."

"The national authorities have assigned a special topic for each day, and their suggestion has been followed in the preparation of this pamphlet. It is expected, however, that in the rural schools each teacher will use her own initiative, and in the larger systems the superintendent will appoint a committee representing the cooperative interests, and that this program will simply act as a helpful guide in arranging for an effective observance of American education week."

INFANT MORTALITY RATE HELD REDUCED

Washington, Nov. 3.—(A. P.)—Federal activities in aid of maternity and infancy during the fiscal year 1925, says the report of Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau, included examination of 290,550 children and were attended by a "substantial drop" in the infant death rate. The bureau co-operated with 622 permanent "child health centers" in 43 states, she related, and 35,997 women were brought through difficulties, while 66,573 mothers attended classes of instruction. She estimated that the cost of the work was less than one cent per capita of the country's population.

Anne Berryman Cast For Lead In Prize Offering

Anne Berryman, wearing away with the Forrest Taylor dramatic stock company, who plays the part of Jude Lowry in "Hell Bent for Heaven," to show at Hellig theater this evening.

"Hell Bent For Heaven," famed as the Pulitzer prize play of 1924 and which had a record-breaking run in New York will be the offering of the Forrest Taylor dramatic stock company for its third engagement at the Hellig theater this evening.

It is quite a distinction for a play to be selected by 12 nationally known newspaper men as the best written of the several hundred original plays produced in New York during the course of the year. For that reason more than the usual interest attaches to the presentation of this gripping comedy drama.

In "Hell Bent For Heaven," Hatcher Hughes, the author, has written a story bubbling over with vigorous, wholesome comedy, a delightful love interest and intensely dramatic situations, involving the family pride of the quaint people of the Blue Ridge mountains.

The story particularly deals with the love of a boy and a girl and the mean machinations of a jealous, unsuccessful rival for the girl's hand. The latter character is the most unconventional lover ever conceived by a playwright. He is a religious fanatic who believes himself to be an agent of God, put on earth to spread far and wide his will. Thus deluding himself, he determines to get rid of the boy for whom the girl has cast aside his attentions. This he attempts to accomplish by getting the girl's brother drunk and filling him with tales about his rival, but before the final curtain he is exposed and driven out and is hard put to get away with his own life.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, carpenter, 659M Marcellus avenue, Manassas, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Adv.
