

WIFE OF MURDER VICTIM IS HELD WITH HER LOVER

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 6.—Seized by police as she heard Ku Klux Klansmen pray for her murdered husband at his grave, Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, 29, and pretty, was in jail today as a witness.

Joseph H. Cowen, iron worker, jewelry salesman and insurance agent, who gave Mrs. Clark $500 of their $2000 "elopement fund" was also in jail charged with murdering William Clark with a hammer early Tuesday at Hillsdale. Clark was a gold beater for jewelry manufacturers.

Clark was murdered at 1 a. m. when he got out of his automobile to open the door of his garage. His wife and her mother, in the car, said they did not even glimpse the murderer. A five-pound stone mason's sledge hammer was found near the garage.

Forty men of the Ku Klux Klan and women of the Kamela walked at the open grave. They were robed and hooded. Mrs. Clark did not get out of her automobile. "She must not have come," whispered one member of the women's klan organization. "She was a member of the Kamela and she is afraid on account of her and Cowen."

As the klan rites began, a cross at the grave's head burst into flames.

In concluding the rites the Rev. Joseph R. Jack said: "The Klan extends its sympathy in this great tragedy to the father, mother and friends." The widow was not mentioned.

The limousine with its police escort roled away. At the police station here Mrs. Clark, weeping and protesting, was dragged from it.

The formal charge against Cowen will be filed later.

MAN STRUCK BY LOG THROWN FORTY FEET

Eugene, Or., Nov. 6.—Hit by a log and tossed for 40 feet through the air, William F. McLee, 44, was injured, perhaps fatally, at Wendling yesterday. He is in a local hospital.

McLee was standing near a log at the Booth-Kelly Lumber company camp, and it either jammed or else signals at the donkey engine were mixed, according to relatives of the injured man. The log struck him, and when he was picked up, it was found that his leg was broken and he was suffering from internal injuries.

McLee was foreman in the woods for the lumber. He is married and has three children.

KING TUT'S BODY IN SARCOPHAGUS SAY EXCAVATORS

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 6.—(A.P.)—The excavators of King Tut-ankh-amen's tomb have discovered what they believe to be definite proof that the body of the youthful Pharaoh is actually in the sarcophagus whose splendors have aroused the admiration of Egyptologists.

Their find consists of the inner coffin, shaped to fit the form of the body. About this is a linen shroud, adhering to and covering all the coffin except the face, on which are painted features customarily depicted on such encasements. The features are believed to represent those of Tut-Ankh-amen himself.

A string of beads and flowers was around the head of the sleeping monarch and on his chest.

Since the finding of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-amen and the discovery in it of so many beautiful works of art, there has been great expectation as to what would be found in the sarcophagus when it was fully opened.

When the lid of the first sarcophagus was lifted October 12, another on which were linen coverings and bouquets, was found. This was beautiful of design, decorated and embellished with multi-colored pieces of glass. On it was an effigy of the god Osiris. Covering it was a thin layer of gold on a marble ground adorned with the wings of the goddess, Nephthys and the serpent goddess, Huto.

SIX MEMBERS OF FAMILY BURNED

Balaton Spa, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(A.P.)—Six members of one family were burned to death by fire which destroyed a bungalow here today. The only orphaned survivor is in a critical condition.

The dead are: George Kemp, 40; Mrs. George Kemp; Viola Allen, 14; Myrtle Allen, 9; Carol Allen, 10, and Marceline Kemp, 11. The Allens were related to Mrs. Kemp by a former marriage. Beatrice Kemp, 9, sole survivor of the family, escaped with her clothing in flames.

Beatrice summoned neighbors but they and the firemen were helpless. The nearest hydrant was a quarter of a mile away.

When the flames died down the bodies were found huddled in one room of the one story building. From the positions of the bodies, a doctor judged Kemp had found a way of escape and had turned back to find the rest of his family, when flames closed their way out.

To give metal articles hard and tarnish resisting surfaces there has been developed a process for electroplating them with an alloy composed chiefly of chromium.

SKAGGS STORES

Money saving Distribution Without Waste Cash stores

The Origin and Operation of Skaggs Stores

Popular conception of the origin of big business institutions frequently proves, when all of the facts are known, to be quite different from the actual manner of their founding. In general, we are prone to regard business as a cold-blooded proposition, devoid of sentiment for ideals, and to think of large concerns as existing and having always existed for the sole purpose of making profits. It is difficult to picture a vast organization as having once been a tiny, one-man business. It is even more difficult to imagine it as having been founded—through rigid self-denial and bitter sacrifice—and with a zeal for public service.

Many people easily attribute altruistic motive and high ideals to men in other walks of life, but for some reason, the soul of the merchant—if, indeed, he be credited with having a soul—is supposed to be shriveled and dried up by the flames of his passionate desire for gain. Probably, merchants themselves—or rather, the system under which merchandising has been done in the past—can be held largely accountable for this attitude on the part of at least a portion of the public. Nevertheless, many of our largest and most successful merchandising institutions have been founded with a sincere desire to render the public a better service than it has been getting and only those men and organizations that have faith and kept alive a deep sense of obligation to their associates and the public have succeeded to any marked degree.

Skaggs Stores originated from the efforts of one man, who, with a sense of public duty, sought to find the means for relieving a situation which was working a severe hardship on a large section of the country and incidentally discovered how richly the public rewards its real servants. This man was S. M. Skaggs, father of the present executive head of Skaggs Stores—a minister of the gospel by choice and vocation—but at that time a struggling homesteader among a lot of other equally hardpressed homesteaders near American Falls, Idaho.

Some two years prior to the opening of the first Skaggs Store at American Falls, Idaho, in 1915, Reverend Skaggs came west in search of his health. The action in and around American Falls appealed to him from the health standpoint, so he filed on a homestead and settled there. As is usual with most preachers, he had very little money and what little he did have was soon expended in the erection of a homesteader's "shanty" the purchase of a team, tools and such equipment as he necessarily must have. He and his family eked out an existence as best they could and by reason of his calling and a natural talent for leadership, he soon became somewhat of a leader among his fellow homesteaders.

Prices on all commodities in American Falls were high—to S. M. Skaggs, seemingly much higher than conditions justified—and frequent discussion with neighbors established a concurrent opinion, but how and what steps to take to correct or overcome this condition was the problem.

Eventually Mr. Skaggs evolved a plan whereby he thought he could operate successfully, a plan which among other things included a program of physical effort for himself which today would be considered little short of heroic. This store could not be an ordinary store nor could it be operated in any ordinary manner. The strictest economy in its installation and operation was necessary, else it would fail in its avowed purpose, which was to reduce prices. To reduce prices, he was practical enough to know that one must reduce operating cost and waste. Therefore, with his purpose of service built upon a great ideal, he formulated a scheme of operation as practical as it was simple.

S. M. Skaggs had no money and nothing on which he could secure money except his character, and to D. W. Davis, then president of the First National Bank of American Falls and later Governor of the State of Idaho, he presented his problem and plans, securing $1,000.

On a rented lot on a side street he erected with his own hands a frame building of dimensions 18 x 22 feet and in this little building in the summer of 1915 was opened the first Skaggs Store of the West. In that store S. M. Skaggs toiled diligently, frequently for weeks at a time walking two and a half miles daily from his homestead to work and back in the evening so that all possible horsepower could be used on the farm.

This store was the first unit in a chain, which in a little more than ten years blankets the Pacific Coast and extending as far as Colorado and Nebraska comprises more than three hundred of the finest food stores.

S. M. Skaggs, some four years after the opening of the first store, with his health regained, returned to the geographical location of his choice and the occupation dictated by his normal conviction—that of preaching the Gospel as he understands it—but many of the methods employed by him, the founder, are still used; used with the knowledge that "He who serves best profits most," and much of the spirit imbued into the lives of the older personnel through their association with him still lives and finds expression.
