CHINESE REBELS UPSETS FEATURE FIRE ON RUSSIANS EASTERN GAMES

Tsingtao, China, Nov. 16.—(A. P.)—Marshall Cheng Tso-Lin's fifth Shantung division, becoming mutinous yesterday, fired from the rear on the Russian white brigade attached to Chang's forces. It is reported that the majority of the Russians were killed.

The Russians were endeavoring to stem the advance of Marshal Wu Pei-Fu's alliance forces when fired on. The wounded lay without medical aid until foreign doctors from Tientsin daringly entered the fighting area and brought them out.

Most of the Fengtien Manchurian troops in Shantung are natives of Shantung, and disinterested observers say it would not be surprising if the majority went over to Wu, as the whole population is said strongly to favor the alliance.

The Russian brigade fired on by the mutineers numbered 3000 and included an armored car party, all the members of which are said to have been killed.

DIVORCE SOUGHT BY PEGGY JOYCE

The story says that Malone called on the same ship as the countess when she left New York recently to establish her legal residence. The count, it was stated, accompanied his wife to the ship, the leave-taking being such that her intentions were not revealed.

Peggy's romance with the count began in Chicago when she was appearing in a revue. The marriage took place eleven days after they had been introduced.

LOCAL HISTORY SLIGHTED SAYS CAREY AT LUNCH

"We Oregonians do not take enough interest in our own local history," it was stated by Judge Charles H. Carey of Portland, author of the history of the state, in an address before the Salem chamber of commerce here this noon. "The average person knows far more about the settlement of the eastern seaboard by the white man than the settlement of the Pacific coast. The early history of this coast is fully as replete with interesting and important incidents as the history of the Atlantic coast," Mr. Carey declared. "You can match any tales of Indian wars along the Atlantic seaboard with stories of Indian wars in the west. There is material here for story writers superior to any other section of the United States."

"I undertake to say that if the political history of Oregon had not been what it was, Abraham Lincoln would never have become president of the United States." Senator Seward of New York would have been given the presidential nomination instead of Lincoln, Judge Carey declared, had Seward not aroused considerable antagonism among politicians because of his support of the Oregon bill, which he finally succeeded in getting passed, admitting Oregon to the union as a state. Seward because secretary of state under Lincoln's administration. The Oregon bill itself was "the vortex of a heated controversy" in the national capital through three sessions of congress. The speaker declared today. The bill passed February 14, 1859.

Immediately preceding the admission of Oregon to the union as a state, slavery existed here, Judge Carey said. The existence of slavery was permitted under the Dred Scott decision of 1857, a ruling of the United States supreme court which permitted the ownership of slaves in territories, regardless of geographical location.

The fight between the democratic and republican party was the hottest in this state in any section of the country for many years, according to Judge Carey. Originally, he said, most of the population was democratic, with a few whigs. The democratic party finally split into pro-slavery and non-slavery, however, and eventually the republican party gained strength.

The state of Washington was cut off from this state in 1853. "But what is not so generally known," said Judge Carey, "is that a serious attempt was made to establish another coast state with the southern part of this state and the northern part of California." The new state, which was planned as a slave state, was to include Josephine, Jackson, Curry and perhaps other counties in the southern part of this state, and several in northern California, he said. It was to be named Jackson.
