COPPOCKS HELD TO CONTRACT BY SUPREME COURT

The supreme court today affirmed the late Judge George G. Blighham of the lower court for Marion county in the case of Charles B. Coppock and Beatrice Coppock, appellants, against L. H. Roberts, an action to recover the sum of $4750. Justice Bean wrote the opinion.

The action was founded upon the alleged rescission of a contract made in 1921 by which Coppock bought from Roberts a tract of land near Turner at an agreed price of $18,500. By agreement the price mentioned in the contract was $19,000, $500 being credited on the contract. The sum of $4250 was also credited on the contract because of the cancellation of a debt due from Roberts to Coppock for the purchase price of a third interest in a timber tract. The balance was payable $5000 on or before five years from the date of the contract and $2250 on or before 10 years from the date, all deferred payments to draw interest at 6 per cent.

In his answer Roberts asked equitable relief, claiming that in October, 1921, an understanding was reached that Coppock would make application to the federal farm loan association for a $10,000 loan to be applied to the balance due Roberts. Roberts agreed upon completion of the loan to extend Coppock credit in the sum of $855, interest due on the contract, together with other sums previously advanced by Roberts to the Coppocks in the sum of $2513, to be evidenced by the unsecured note of the Coppocks who agreed that while credit was extended they would not mortgage or encumber the livestock, tools and implements used by them on the farm.

Coppock's application for a loan was refused by the federal farm loan association, and the Joint Stock Land Bank of California offered to make a loan of $8000, provided it be made in Roberts' name instead of the Coppocks. This was done.

The bank required that the contract be re-delivered to Roberts as to clear his title, Roberts said the Coppocks agreed that another contract would be issued to cover the transfer of the land to the Coppocks. This included a provision of $4250 for a third interest in the timber claim deeded by Beita J. Pemberton to Roberts. Coppock agreed with Beita J. Pemberton that she was to accept the Coppock note for $4250 until such time as the Coppocks secured title, when the Coppocks agreed to give her a second mortgage on the premises to secure her loan.

Roberts alleges that the Coppocks delayed accepting the new contract, claiming that they were trying to secure $2000 from other sources, and that in September, 1922, they refused to accept the contract. He alleged the contract was never rescinded. When the case was taken to court a decree requiring the Coppocks to comply with the contract.

Al Jolson Declares He Never Even Knew Rhinelander's Wife

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 17. (A. P.)—Al Jolson, black faced comedian, took the witness stand today at the trial of Leonard Kip Rhinelander's annulment suit against his wife, Alice Beatrice Rhinelander, past negress, and denied that he had ever seen her at a summer resort in 1922, as she had represented in a letter to Rhinelander.

Jolson took the stand in the midst of cross-examination of Young Rhinelander at the request of Isaac N. Mills, the plaintiff's attorney. Jolson denied that he had been in Paul Smith's, New York in the Adirondack mountains, at the time that Alice wrote Leonard she had met him and found him "some flit with the girls."

"I never in my life even saw either the defendant or the plaintiff," said Jolson. "I was in Atlantic City at the time she wrote she saw me. I've had enough trouble about this already. My wife doesn't talk to me. Now maybe I'll be able to eat breakfast at home tomorrow."

As the crowded court room burst into laughter, Leo Parsons Davis, Mrs. Rhinelander's attorney arose and explained that Alice's reference to Jolson was really to another man who had been nicknamed "Al Jolson" because of his stand to permit consumption of young Rhinelander's gross-examination.

"Every time I walk from my dressing room," he said, "with a smile, the orchestra plays 'Alice is going to make a very difficult witness.'"

"My uncle replied: 'She is going to tell the truth and that should not give you any trouble.' That was good right. The conversation ended there."

She then told of receiving the next day the celebrated statement from Captain Foley, which she understood she was to read to the court.

to say. He said: 'Yes, but let's rehearse it now. What's on your mind? What's the object of your appearance?'

"In answer the object was to lay emphasis on the fact that the court had evaded what I regarded as an important matter; that the official correspondence sustained my statement immediately after the accident and this had been slurred over."

Captain Foley told her, she said, that the court was not to question her; that she merely was to make a statement.

Warned by Uncle.

"My uncle said, 'Captain Foley, I think that is fair enough,'" she continued. Then she said, her uncle excused himself and went into the hall, beckoned to her to follow him, and said to her: "Don't tell him a damned thing. He is not here for your good."

Mrs. Lansdowne said Captain Foley argued with her against her saying that the Shenandoah Night was a political fight, and urged her aunt not to let her "make a long statement."

Traffic Problems And Better Lights Are Most Stressed

Cleaner Streets Urged

Seven writers demand cleaner streets and lots and would bring it about by the cutting of weeds and grass or by compelling the merchants to keep the sidewalks clean in front of their stores. Two suggest that street proachers be barred and one adds that street peddlers go with them. Removal of junk piles in the suggestion of one writer and the repair and maintenance of sidewalks more adequately than at present is urged by four.

Two writers want the city building code changed for the general welfare of the city, particularly fire protection. One wants an open town and another a better water supply for fire fighting. One writer thinks the police department isn't too much and three think it doesn't see enough. Patronize home labor is the slogan of two letter-writers and three urge a curb on both the cinema and the smelt from local factories. Two urge the establishment of a city incinerator. Two think the councilmen are too particular in requirements of new industries and urge a more generous policy.

One citizen would have safety zones where street cars stop, one wants a municipal auditorium and another fears an un-American influence in the schools, and asks that they be guarded against. Compulsory church attendance, elimination of small order houses, a public natatorium and an injunction suit against the state of California to prevent its selling Oregon fruits as its own got one vote each.

Better bridges come in for four votes, lower taxes for hour, fire department two and lower car fare two.

The French have received only 1000 troops in reinforcements in the last fortnight, and there is considerable nervousness in the foreign colonies, especially among the Italians, who are anxious to have their warships, now at Rhodes, come here.
