The river steamer Northwest, completing its first round trip of the fall season between Salem and Portland Saturday evening, when the boat docked at Salem, left again for Portland Sunday morning. The only incident of the trip was difficulty getting past a point just below Woodland park on the trip up the river, the channel at that point being too narrow, and the Northwestern spending some four hours in getting past it. The boat carries light loads of less than 100 tons, and will continue to carry light loads until the water rises farther than its present level. The level of the river was only 4 of a foot above normal at 7 o'clock this morning, and was falling.

HOPE SEES A STAR

Life in a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud and the only answer is the echo of our wailing cry. From the voiceless lips of the unrepining dead there comes no word, but the sight of death hope sees in the sign and listening love can hear the rustle of a wing.
