

COUNCIL FAILS TO GIVE PERMIT TO STEINBOCK

Whether H. Steinbock will be allowed to build, on the Southern Pacific company's property on North Commercial street, a fire making and vulcanizing plant in which a number of prominent Salem citizens are ready to take stock, is yet up in the air according to developments at the city council meeting last night. In the end it was referred to the Chamber of Commerce.

For several weeks Steinbock has been trying to get the council to allow him to put up a corrugated iron building on the site at a cost of $10,000, but the council has delayed action for the reason that half of the building would be in the fire limit, and corrugate iron buildings are prohibited in the fire limit. Alderman Rosebaugh started the argument last night by rebuking the council for treating Steinbock's proposal as a joke. Several members resented the implication that they had treated the question lightly. Alderman Dancy declared that not only would half the building be within the fire limit, but that all the property owners in the district were opposed to a factory in the neighborhood. Steinbock replied that it would not be a factory but a vulcanizing plant, and that he would put up a concrete building if necessary. He declared further that if he couldn't get permission to build on the site that he would take the plant to some other town.

"To stop the argument," said Dancy, "I will say what I did not want to say tonight. I have it on good authority that the Southern Pacific company will not lease the site to Mr. Steinbock."

Rosebaugh had moved that the matter be referred to the Chamber of Commerce, and Dancy advised that the chamber could aid Steinbock in finding a new site, this motion carried.
