Drunkness in Salem decreased about 50 per cent in November as compared with October, according to a report by Chief of Police Minuto. The drunk cases for the two months were 21 in October and 15 in November. There were thirteen arrests for possession of liquor in October and only five in November. Offenders in general seemed to be on the slump during the month, with only 203 cases on the blotter as compared with 219 the month previous. Traffic violations were 53 and 46.

Stealing automobile cushions is the latest pastime of auto thieves Harry Levy, Dwight Parr and Dr. Backstrand of the Oregon State hospital, all are being looted in this regard in one night. What the thieves do with them is a matter puzzling the car owners. All of the seats taken were from different makes of cars and entirely different types of seats, and the thieves seemed to have plucked them promiscuously. There may still be other seat thefts yet unreported. No trace has been found of the seats, and owners who lost their seats and at first thought they were victims of practical jokes, but later bought new seats and went their ways.

AUGUSTUS MUTT VOTED MEMBER OF LONGFELLOWS

"You were unanimously elected into honorary membership in the Salem Longfellow club last night. Congratulations. We're with you in your arguments with that little runt. We know how it is."

Such was the text of a telegram dispatched to Augustus Mutt, cartoon creature of Bud Fisher, by the Salem Longfellow club this morning.

Members of the club, in voting Mutt into membership, declared that he is placed at too frequent intervals in embarrassing positions—of the recipient of a rolling pin, for instance. The fact makes his situation similar to theirs, they declare, for they are forced to walk under awnings too low, wear shoes too short, sleep in beds not long enough, and are generally abused because of their unusual length.

W. W. Rosebraugh was appointed toastmaster for the evening. A number of members were called upon for speeches. Lewis Lunsford, asked to define a Longfellow, stated, "He is one of five per cent of our population, but suffers 99 per cent of our discomforts."
