

TURKEYS FIRM AT 44 CENTS; EGGS DROP 2 CENTS

Portland, Dec. 19.—(A.P.)—The local turkey market is firmly established at 44 cents this morning on prime, dressed birds. The heavy receipts expected today were sadly disappointing, local jobbers were hard put in finding enough birds to fill shipping orders.

Commission houses still look for heavy receipts tomorrow and Monday. Should the offerings increase this market will not hold but if receipts continue light, prices may again reach the 47 cent top prevailing at Thanksgiving time.

Other lines of poultry are scarce and prices well maintained. Heavy hens are bringing 25 and 26 cents with light hens generally around 19 and 20 cents. Springs move out well at 25 cents.

Not enough ducks and geese are coming to establish definite price level.

Recent gains in the local egg market have been lost and prices are one to two cents lower today. Fresh standard firsts are posted at 38 cents on the exchange with firsts at 35 cents, a loss of one cent.

Mediums, undersized and current receipts are down two cents.

The local butter market closed easy. On the dairy exchange lower grade cubes were posted 1/2 to one cent lower. High score cubes were unchanged. Prints and fat prices are steady.

Country dressed meats were in moderate supply today but the demand was light and prices held generally steady at 15 1/2 to 16 cents on veal and 16 cents on choice light hogs.

Very little business was reported in the local hog market during the past week and prices were generally steady. Around 500 hogs changed hands at prices said to range from 20 to 21 cents.

WOOL GROWERS CLOSING POOLS OF OREGON WOOLS

The Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers are closing their pool of Willamette Valley and western Oregon wools embracing the products of upward of one thousand growers of graded farm flock wools including among others, the well known Utopia and other light shrinking pasture wools.

This is the fifth annual pool had for these growers by the cooperative association and coincides with the period of the original Marketing Agreement entered into in 1921 as a direct result of the lack of interest in these wools shown by the traders at Albany, Oregon, in 1921.

History of Organization
The Cooperative had its inception through a call by agricultural leaders at Albany, Oregon, in 1921.

The growers decided that the best help is self help and organized under the name of the Oregon Wool and Mohair Growers Cooperative Association.

Members Well Paid
While the returns are a little lower than last year, the members have been well paid for the additional work in sharply increased prices and have received the benefit of direct selling to the worsted and woolen mills, during the consumptive period.

The Pacific this year opened its new warehouse in Portland where it is better equipped to display and sell its various lines of wool and is conveniently situated to ship to visiting members just how the wools are handled. It has been able to stabilize the values of the light shrinking Willamette Valley wools and all growers have benefited to a large extent by its establishment of better wool prices.

The association expense has been reduced year by year, and shows a further reduction this year of about ten per cent. The total hand

MANY SALES OF FARM PROPERTY BEING RECORDED

Activity in movement of farm lands in and near the immediate vicinity of Salem has begun to be noticeable during the past few weeks, it was stated this morning by Leo N. Childs of Childs & Bechtel, real estate firm.

"This is the first indication of renewed activity since the war," stated Mr. Childs. "The farm land market during the past few years has been very quiet, but this year the farmers have realized good prices on all their products, and the interest to return to the farm has begun to appear."

Among sales reported by Childs and Bechtel are the following: W. J. Kelly of Portland has bought a 50 acre tract on Howell Prairie from Ben Clement paying $7500.

A. Balch has sold an improved 10 acre tract in the Fruitland district to John Krumm, for a consideration of $4500.

Lee Dowd, recently from Canada, has purchased two tracts about five miles east of Salem on the Silverton road. One tract, consisting of 37 1/2 acres, he bought from Clifford T. Jones. The other, 34 1/2 acres, he bought from G. T. Johnston. He paid $2000 in cash for two tracts.

The M. K. Forrest 47 acre farm with stock and machinery, located in Linn county, has been sold to Charles H. Harness, recently from Nebraska. The purchase price was $5500. The section where the farm is located is known as the Fox Valley district.

TRAINMAN, HIT BY LOG, BETTER

W. J. Hendricks, a Southern Pacific freight conductor, is at the Salem hospital with a serious skull fracture caused by a mishap at the log dump on the Polk county side of the river Thursday. Hendricks was unconscious until last night when he partially regained consciousness and was able to recognize his mother.

Logs were being unloaded from a car when one of the standards that supported the load gave way, allowing a heavy log to shoot off the car. The end of it struck Hendricks squarely in the forehead.

With the favorable developments last night physicians believe Hendricks has a good chance for recovery. He is about 35 years old and unmarried.

USED CARS

The Car You Need At a Big Saving

If you are not already the possessor of a good automobile, you plan to be. Today, a car is rated well-nigh indispensable to one's business success, social prestige and convenience.

In a great many instances the investment called for by a new car of the type you prefer is greater than you care to make. One way out of such a difficulty is to compromise on something new but cheaper and less desirable.

Another, and very popular, plan is to buy what you want but in the way of a renewed car. This method appeals especially to the thrifty buyer. In most instances the good used car you settle upon can be bought on terms, too.
