ALDINO BABE BORN IN INDO-CHINESE FAMILY

Seattle, Wash.—Curtis King, a Memphis manufacturer, in Seattle this summer, returning from the Far East, told of an albino child that had been born to parents of the Meis race, a savage tribe wearing brass rings on ankles and wrists and whose wars are placed with strange ornaments. King said he traveled hundreds of miles out of his way to the settlement of Djiring, French Indo-China, to take pictures of the youngster.

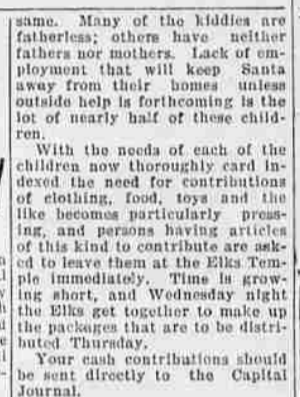

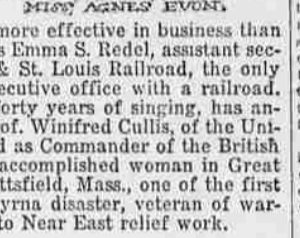

When the baby was born the parents and the rest of the jungle community were so amazed that they feared some evil was descending upon them, King related. The child is now four years old.

BRIGANDS HALT FARM PROJECT IN MANCHURIA

Harbin.—The recent tragic death of Morgan Palmer at the hands of Chinese brigands on his ranch in northern Manchuria forms the latest chapter in a history of ten years' effort by Americans to develop modern agriculture in China on a large scale. Ten years ago a group of Americans, lured by the rich undeveloped regions in upper Manchuria, organized the Manchurian Development company, with the purpose of introducing American machinery in cultivation of vast tracts where workmen and work animals were scarce.

In the News of the Day

A womanly woman is more effective in business than a mannish woman, says Miss Emma S. Redel, assistant secretary of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, the only woman to hold such an executive office with a railroad. Dame Nellie Melba, after forty years of singing, has announced her retirement. Prof. Winifred Cullis, of the University of London, decorated as Commander of the British Empire, ranks as the most accomplished woman in Great Britain. Agnes Evon, of Pittsfield, Mass., one of the first American nurses at the Smyrna disaster, veteran of war-time nursing, has returned to Near East relief work.

same. Many of the kiddies are fatherless; others have neither fathers nor mothers. Lack of employment that will keep Santa away from their homes unless outside help is forthcoming is the lot of nearly half of these children.

With the needs of each of the children now thoroughly card indexed the need for contributions of clothing, food, toys and the like becomes particularly pressing, and persons having articles of this kind to contribute are asked to leave them at the Elks Temple immediately. Time is growing short, and Wednesday night the Elks get together to make up the packages that are to be distributed Thursday.

Your cash contributions should be sent directly to the Capital Journal.

A special Christmas program will be presented at the Oregon state school for the blind at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. A short play, "Christmas in Many Lands" will be a main feature of the program. The entertainment will begin with a medley of Christmas carols by Carl Lemke. "O Holy Night" will be presented by Alice Anderson and Dan Roberts. Other numbers will be "The Red Candle," by Melvin Smith, "The Three Kings," and "He Shall Feed His Flock" by five of the pupils of the school. "The Night After Christmas," by Wilbur Harrison and "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," by the senior chorus.

declared, has been to protect the criminal when brought up to trial rather than to protect society by making it easy to ascertain whether or not the defendant is guilty. "In Scotland," he said, "if a defendant wants to plea an alibi, or self defense, or insanity, he must give due notice that such is to be his plea. Then it is possible for the state to investigate and see whether the defendant really was where he pretends to have been, or did what he pretended to do. Why for nearly 150 kiddies. There is one family of four children, two boys and two girls ranging in age from 4 to 13 years that has scarcely enough clothing to keep them warm, even during the moderate weather prevalent here so far this winter, and not enough to keep them dry. The mother has no means of providing anything for Christmas. For the information of interested persons this is case No. 45.

Case No. 40 is that of a mother, two boys 6 and 7, and a baby. The father is in the hospital with tuberculosis. The investigators report that sweaters for the boys, shoes for the baby, size 5 1/2, and some house dresses for the mother, along with food, comprise the principal needs in this case.

There are seven children in the family that is classified as case No. 67, and at present they are quarantined. Some of the children are almost without shoes and stockings, there is practically no food in the house, and next to no money with which to buy any. The father wants a job, any kind, for his Christmas, but even with it he cannot see where Christmas is coming from for the rest.

This it goes, thru case after case, most of them very much the should it not be the same in this country? Here the state is kept in the dark until the time of trial.

There were 11,000 homicides in the United States in the year 1924, the speaker declared. "This is twice the number in Italy, the home of the black hand, and nine times the number in England, during the same period. There were 389 murders in Chicago, a city of 3,000,000 inhabitants, during the year—enough for one each day and several extra for the holidays. The city of Philadelphia has 20 more murders during the year than all the entire Dominion of Canada.

"Why should there be so much difference? Human nature is largely the same the world over." The great trouble, Judge Coshow declared, is that the great pendulum of governmental affairs has swung from one extreme to the other. At one time the monarchy, with its bigoted, autocratic king, was the prevailing government. Gradually, he said, the spirit of freedom asserted itself, until people have assumed to themselves too much personal liberty and little or no regard for constituted authority.

The speaker was interrupted by applause at several points in his address.
