"I think our company will be exceedingly fortunate in securing the services of so competent a manager. Mr. Aldred would not consent to come to Salem until he first investigated growing conditions in the Willamette Valley, and the quality of our fibre. After becoming satisfied on these matters, Mr. Aldred emphatically informed our directors he would not come if we were to engage in the manufacture of "bread and butter" goods, saying there was little profit in it, and he would not come unless he could make money for the company. In order to show faith in our project, Mr. Aldred agreed to give us the benefit of his services for one year for a salary sufficient to cover his actual living expenses, provided we would give him a percentage of our net earnings thereafter.

"According to our understanding with the Canadian people, we were to sell them 1,000 shares of the common stock of our corporation at par, which would have given them practically the control of the company, but as it is, the control is in the hands of the citizens of Salem. These 1,000 shares of stock will be retained by the company where it will receive no dividends, thereby increasing the dividends and value of the remaining common stock.

"There were no differences between our company and the Dominions Linens Limited, except as to policy. The severance of our relations were mutually agreeable. We still have their good will, as is shown by a letter I received from Mr. D. N. Sanson dated December 14, 1925, in which he said:

"'If at any time any member of our organization can be of any assistance to the people of Salem in connection with their linen business, I shall be glad to hear from you. Or, if any of the good friends I met in Salem should be coming east, I should be extremely pleased receive a visit from you or them.'

"There has never been a time when the prospects of our industry looked so optimistic. We have sufficient stock subscribed to erect a mill in Salem, with 100 looms, and about 1200 spindles, pay the tariff and freight thereon, including the costs of a site, buildings and incidental expenses, leaving a sufficient working capital. The spindles will be manufactured in Europe, and the looms purchased at Lockport, New York. This will give us an up-to-date, well equipped mill.

"The directors feel that by the change of policies, we will start our mill when completed, upon a sound financial basis.

"You should bare in mind, if this mill does not prove a paying investment, the flax in Oregon will be set back a quarter of a century, for such a failure will deter capital from again venturing in a like enterprise. Consequently, the directors have endeavored to be thorough in their investigations in all things essential to the success of our undertaking. We now feel that we are starting on the right line, which if carried out, will make our investments safe, and start a great industry in Salem and the Willamette Valley."
