An innovation in musical instruments was introduced by R. C. Stevens, deputy commissioner of the state department of insurance, at this noon's luncheon of the Salem Rotary club. The instrument, called a swahoozophone, was constructed with a cigar box, a broom handle, and a single wire. Mr. Stevens played it with a violin bow, using a second cigar box to move up and down the wire as he played. He rendered two swahoozophone solos, the first being "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," and the second "Mother Machree." When he attempted to play Schubert's "Ave Maria" the piece was apparently too much for the instrument, for it broke. Stevens mended it and attempted to go on with his swahoozophone playing, but it broke again, and he quit with the remark, "I'm sorry; that one is my masterpiece." He also had in his possession two other swahoozophones, one of which was made with a tin can instead of a cigar box.

FILIPINOS PAY ORAL TRIBUTE TO JOSE RIZAL

Tribute to Jose Rizal, the George Washington of every patriotic Filipino, was paid in an impressive manner with special program arranged by Salem Filipinos at Waller hall last night. President Carl Gregg Doney of Willamette university gave the main address of the evening. The auditorium at Waller hall was nearly filled with persons who accepted the Filipino invitation to attend the program.

Dr. Doney, in sketching the outline of Rizal's life, stated that the life of that hero was the "most amazing biography I have ever read." Rizal, at the age of three, was able to read and write the language used by the natives among whom he was born. By the time he was six he produced a piece of sculpturing that won a gold medal at the international fair held in St. Louis. He wrote a creditable hand at the age of 7 years. He graduated from college at the age of 15, winning high honors over a number of Spanish classmates, despite the fact that the school was operated by Spanish authorities who looked down upon all persons of Philippine birth.

After graduating he went to Madrid and became an eye specialist, and succeeding in saving the vision of his mother, whose sight had been greatly impaired by mistreatment at the hands of the Spaniards. Eventually he became a master in the fields of language, engineering, medicine, poetry, sculpture, art, music and other branches of learning. He produced novels that helped to stir up opposition to the Spanish regime then in force among the Philippine islands.

Unlike most famous revolutionists, Rizal did not advocate the use of armed force. Dr. Doney stated in his speech, but preferred to accomplish his ends through education of the people.

At the age of 35 he was executed by the Spanish authorities on a trumped up charge.

A special Philippine string orchestra was a feature of last night's program. It gave an overture previous to the beginning of the regular program, several string selections, and the Philippine national anthem and the Star

Spangled Banner at the close of the affair.

Rev. Fred C. Taylor, pastor of the First Methodist church of Salem, gave the invocation.

Simone Flores, a Filipino, gave a few introductory remarks.

Antonio DeFina made a speech on the life of Rizal.

Pelix Ramos delivered "My Last Farewell" by Dr. Rizal.

Miss Gladys McIntyre of the Willamette music school gave a vocal solo.

Marcus P. Berhano made a speech on "Philippine-American Relationship."

Emilio Bonislaw gave a guitar solo.

SAYS HEREDITY BASIS OF CANCER

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 30.—(AP)—The sole basis of cancer is heredity and people born without a strain of the disease are immune Dr. L. C. Strong of the Bussey Institute of Harvard university declared here today at the conclusion of a symposium on cancer conducted by the American Society of Zoologists. To this announcement however, Dr. Strong added that even where hereditary traces exist, environmental factors would seem to be necessary as irritants in order to make the disease active.

Others who spoke were Dr. James Murphy of the Rockefeller Institute for medical research and Dr. Halsey J. Bagg of the Cora Medical college.

Declaring that no theory can be formulated now as to the cause of cancer, Dr. Murphy asserted that recent published announcement of the isolation of the cancer germ by Dr. Gye of London, working in collaboration with Dr. Barnard are not to be accepted without important reservations.

AMENDMENTS THREATEN AMERICAN LIBERTY

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 30.—(A. P.)—American Liberty will abide only as long as Americans have a union of national and state governments, each having an even balance of power, Chester L. Long of Wichita, Kan., president of the American Bar association and former United States senator, told members of the Nebraska Bar association here today.

Liberty and government should go hand in hand, he added.

The former senator denounced what he termed the efforts of various members of congress to destroy state government through legislation. He cited the proposed twentieth amendment, giving federal regulation to child labor, as an example of "this flagrant invasion of local self-government."
