Contributions to this colum must be plainly written on one side of paper only, limited to 300 words in length and signed with the name of the writer. Articles not meeting these specifications will be rejected.

To the Editor:—So the literary censors would select our reading? That will be fine—will save us time making our own selections.

Now as to Shakespeare the deer poacher, or was it Lord Bacon the bribe taker, there are some things in these famous writing that could be dispensed without serious loss to the reader, as for instance "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Old nasty Jack Falstaff could be pitchforked out and nobody wronged. Also "Venus and Adonis," and "Tarquim and Lucretia." These and other selections might be omitted in expurged editions. Still none of us need be shocked because we can pass them by and read the county commissioners' reports or the doings of Salem city council. This age is full of prudes and Miss Nancys, male and female. They can gag at a gnat and swallow a blow fly.

These moral meddlers will always be with us, great is the pity. As to the Bible, it has its censors and critics aplenty, all the way from Wellhausen and further back down to Dr. Briggs and Harry Emerson Fosdick. Yet the old book is still here. Recently there is a large demand for Bibles in war-torn China and in Mexico. Agencies say they cannot supply the demand. This might appear it is about as easy to get rid of the critics as the Bible.

P. S.—Our good evening paper could improve Dumb Dora by furnishing her with a suit of clothes.
