MARK TWAIN LONGED FOR WIG OF FRIEND

Berlin.—(AP)—A story about Mark Twain not widely known is told by Peter Richards, the newspaper artist now living in Berlin, who traveled with the American humorist as his personal caricaturist from New York to Liverpool on the former's tour of Europe.

Both men shared a cabin into which Twain was wont to rush at all hours of the day to vent his wrath against the many gushing young women, and others not quite so young, among the passengers, who insisted upon having "just a lock of dear Mr. Clemens' hair as a souvenir."

One afternoon Richards, who wore a wig, was about to take a snooze in his bunk. For greater comfort he was taking off his wig to hang it on a hook alongside. During the act Mark Twain pounced into the cabin. Seeing what Richards was about he stopped dead in his tracks, looked meditatively at his headdress and finally burst out:

"What a lucky devil you are, Richards. Now if I owned a wig like that all I'd have to do would be to hang it on the doorknob outside and tell those crazy females on deck to help themselves."

SUBSCRIPTION DRIVE ON HINDENBURG HOME

Berlin.—(AP)—To present the ancestral Hindenburg estate of "Neudeck," near Eylau in East Prussia, to the country's venerable soldier president as a befitting gift for his 80th anniversary October 12 the principal industria, trade and agricultural associations of Germany have joined forces to start a nationwide subscription drive.

As the "Neudeck" estate is situated in that district in which in 1914 General von Hindenburg defeated the Russian forces and thereby saved the state of East Prussia from a Russian invasion, the manorial property, which long since had passed to a remote branch of the family but which now is for sale, is to be renamed "Hindenburg Dank" (Hindenburg Thanks) and presented to President von Hindenburg for himself and his heirs. The outbuildings will be turned into a home for aged veterans, but the manor house is to be retained as a family seat.

GERMAN'S NOT SOLID UPON FLAG'S COLOR

Berlin.—(AP)—Objections on the part of the old regime to the republican colors sometimes assume grotesque forms. On Constitution Day, August 11, everybody laughed at the Public Record Office, where in obedience to orders the black, red and gold republican colors had been hoisted, but the flag which was flown was a toy flag, hardly visible from the pavement.

Mayor Walker found himself unexpectedly involved in this everlasting quarrel when Mayor Boess of Berlin, on a matter of principle, declined to attend a dinner in the former's honor at one of the fashionable hotels which had neglected flying the national flag band had been boycotted in consequence by republican officials. In the Prussian Diet, a nationalist member registered a solemn complaint against the Minister of Public Instruction because at a school treat children were given candies in little black, red and gold colored bags.

Now a new solution is suggested by a leading Munich paper, which proposes black, white and blue as a combination of the two largest German states—the Prussian black and white and the Bavarian blue and white—which it thinks should be acceptable to all German factions.
