OPEN CHILDREN'S WARD AT HOSPITAL

For the first time in its history the Salem General hospital now has a children's ward, with six cribs. Work of tinting the walls of the ward was completed this week, a pale green color being used.

Miss Adeline Hughes, R. N., superintendent of the hospital, is anxious that donations such as are made by friends and patrons of the institution will include toys, articles and books appropriate for the ward. Because of a lack of funds, it will be impossible to have suitable mural decorations unless someone endowed with an artistic touch volunteers service for the work. Such a contribution would be of inestimable value to the hospital, Miss Hughes declares.

Alabama Makes War On Masked Floggers In 130 Indictments

Three Alabama counties, spurred by Atty. Gen. C. C. McCall (upper left), have voted 130 indictments in an effort to end floggings. Before one grand jury James Esdale (upper right), reputed grand dragon of the Alabama Ku Klux Klan, was called to testify. Eugene Doss (lower right) is the first Alabaman sentenced to prison for participating in a whipping.

Birmingham, Ala., (AP) — The state of Alabama has entered a finish fight on masked violence.

In a series of sensational investigations and trials, reaching into virtually every corner of the state, Attorney General Charlie C. McCall has obtained 12 convictions and more than 130 indictments of persons accused of complicity in midnight "whipping parties."

Starting but three months ago with the investigation, trial and conviction of seven men accused of whipping Jeff Calloway, youthful farm worker at Oneonta, in Blount county, the attorney general moved swiftly into Jefferson and Crenshaw counties, where state investigators have laid bare more than a score of lashings.

The most sweeping of the flogging inquiries was made by a grand jury sitting at Luverne, in Crenshaw county, where 102 indictments for kidnapping and assault and battery were returned October 15, against 45 persons after they had been charged with complicity in 20 or more masked floggings.

In its report to Circuit Judge A. E. Gamble the grand jury said all of those indicted were "members of the Ku Klux Klan and with a single exception all of the whippings were committed by men wearing the robes and hoods of the Klan."

Men high in the affairs of the state and county were called before the grand jury. Among those who testified were James Esdale, said to be the grand dragon of the Klan in Alabama; George H. Thigpen, state superintendent of insurance; Ira B. Thompson, Luverne attorney, and reputed exalted cyclops of the Luverne Klan unit, and the Rev. L. A. Nalls, pastor of a Luverne Baptist church.

The investigating body seized records and regalia of the Luverne klavern.

Trial of the 45 indicted men will be held at Luverne. The attorney general has indicated that he will direct the prosecution personally.

Better Health - Longer Life

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

THE VISION OF GORGAS

By Mark L. Emerson, M. D., Oakland, Calif. Member Gorgas Memorial

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as part of its better health and longer life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the Memorial, which has been organized and endowed by prominent doctors and laymen throughout the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Hearquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago.)

Major-General Gorgas was a man who went to places that were so filthy and unhealthful that no one could live there. He made them so beautiful and wonderful that now everybody wants to go and see them.

This does not apply only to cleaning up the yellow fever plague and making the Panama Canal possible, but it applies all over the world wherever Major-General Gorgas went—in every institution, home or hamlet.

The vision of Major-General Gorgas was such an inspiration to others that everyone who grasped the idea was trying to do likewise.

About 20 years ago, at the school for the deaf and blind at Berkeley, Cal., there was an epidemic of small-pox Thirty-six children were smitten with the dread disease. Since then, every child who comes to the institution is vaccinated on the day he enters and from that time to this there has not been another case of small-pox.

Every year there would be an average of five or six cases of diphtheria, with an occasional death. Six years ago all the children were tested in order to see if they could get diphtheria. It was found that 26 of these children were immune and would not get diphtheria even if they were exposed to it. However, a majority of the 300 were still capable of getting it. So all the children were rendered immune against diphtheria, and since then there has not been another case of diphtheria in the school.

Such preventive measures were the vision of Major-General Gorgas.

Major-General Gorgas was buried from St. Paul's cathedral with representatives of the king and queen of England in attendance, and his bier was followed through the streets by a riderless horse. All this was a mark of the highest esteem for this great American by the British government.

DIPTHERIA

By Orville Harry Brown, M. D., Phoenix, Ariz., Member Gorgas Memorial.

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as part of its better health and longer life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the Gorgas Memorial, which has been organized and endowed by prominent doctors and laymen throughout the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago.)

This is the season of the year when those who have children get terribly frightened whenever there are complaints of sore throats. We wonder if the present generation can quite appreciate the terrors of a people when epidemics of diphtheria came before the days of antitoxin.

A child with diptheria is usually extremely sick—much sicker than would appear to be warranted from the amount of fever. The temperature is usually from 102 to 103 degrees, which is not high for a child. The little patient is listless, and the skin is usually pale. A child may, however, have such a light attack that he does not even feel ill enough to go to bed.

Symptoms as described should warn the parents so that a physician is called early. The doctor will examine the throat carefully, and if there are whitish membranes on the throat or nose he will take small bits of the growth and examine it thoroughly under the microscope. If diptheria bacteria are found, he will return very soon and give the child an injection of diphtheria antitoxin. The whitish membrane will soon begin to disappear from the throat and nose.

By the Schick test we can tell if a child is in danger of taking diphtheria after being exposed. The test is made by placing a bit of toxin upon a scratch on the skin. If the child is in danger of taking the disease, a red area will appear within 48 hours about the spot upon which the toxin was placed.

Salem Boy's Invention May Minimize Risks Of Trans - Sea Flights

That the invention of a Salem boy may make more Nungesser-Coli, Mildred Doran, and Paul Redfern tragedies, less likely is forseen in word received from the University of California campus of the invention of a new type of navigation sextant by Hofard B. Kaster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kaster who live on Route 5, box 44, Salem.

Young Kaster is a member of the astronomy department of the University of California.

The new sextant which he has just completed is said to be of great value in navigation, particularly in transocean flights as it will make observations of aerial navigators easier and more accurate. New tests of the sextant are being made by university experts this week. If the sextant proves the success financially that it is expected to be, Kaster has agreed to give half the proceeds to the University.

Members of the university investigating committe say that the completion and use of the instrument should mark an important step in transoceanic flying where determination of a plane's position is essential. Because of the mechanical difficulties and the mathematical computations involved the old type of sextant has been unsatisfactory. The exact position can be read directly from Kaster's new sextant without referring to a mass of formula. The new instrument has already been tried on a government destroyer under moderate weather conditions and was said to be very successful.

The parents of the inventor have lived in Salem for more than ten years. The elder Kaster was the first manager of the local paper mill. Another son, Joe Kaster, Jr., is now mill superintendent.

127 YEAR OLD NEWSPAPER

One of the prized possessions of Charles Maxwell, colored resident of Salem for the past 15 years, is a copy of the Ulster County Gazette, published at Kingston, N. Y. by Samuel Freer & Sons, and dated Saturday, January 4, 1800. One of the features of the paper is six verses (By a Young Lady) reprinted from the Ulster County Gazette on the death of George Washington, in connection with a story upon the entombment of Washington on December 20, of the previous year, who died December 14, 1799.

Newspaper readers of those days did not have the advantages offered those of today, for the publishers, under th following notation—"By arrival of the Factor from Falmouth we are put in possession of London papers to the 20th of October, inclusive, from which we make the following selections:". The selections concerned an attack of the British forces which caused the Dutch general to retreat with the loss of one French general and 200 men killed. Other articles told of engagements in September and October in which it is stated that "this part of Switzerland may be considered as evacuated for the present". The remainder of the publication dealt with activities of the American Congress and advertisements.

KIDNEYS NEED LOT OF WATER

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablesponful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, can not injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.
