SEEKS INQUIRY INTO WORK'S ACTS

cleared invalid by the department of justice.

And these two developments, with oil as their background, had two others for company.

The District of Columbia court for interpretations on five points of appeals asked the supreme court involved in the appeal of Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, now under sentence for contempt of the senate, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, has begun returning $8,000 which he received as par of a prospective fund of $160,000 which he intended to return to Sinclair.

Sinclair gave the $160,000 to the republican party in 1920 and when the circumstances of the gift came to light, Senator Borah said he felt that party morals demanded its return. He announced that he would receive voluntary contributions to "purge" the Sinclair contribution.

That was some months ago. He began parceling out $8,000 to 340 persons yesterday. Asked about the interest on the money, Borah smiled and replied: "I can say I am not charging anything for my services."

Stewart, tall, thick-set and gray haired, showed his joy at his acquittal yesterday by giving each of the three women jurors, a hearty hug. He has twice been brought to trial after facing a senate committee and has twice gone free, being acquitted in May on a contempt charge.

The oil magnate's defense was chiefly the contention that there was not a quorum of the senate present when he testified, and the official record of the public lands committee was also attacked.

The ruling of Justice Jennings Bailey, who presided, on the absence or presence of a quorum was criticized by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, after the verdict.

In his instructions to the jury Judge Bailey ruled that before a meeting of a senate committee could be valid, a majority of its members must be actually and physically present. He told the jurors to settle the quorum question first of all and that if it was agreed that the requirements were not fulfilled to return a verdict of acquittal at once.

"Such decisions," the senator said, "have made our juris-prudence the laughing stock of the civilized world."

Senator Walsh, who has figured quite prominently in the oil investigations to date, in making the announcement that he thought still more probing was needed, said:

"I want to know why Mr. Work stood by this renewal. I am led to believe that he knew of the invalidity of the lease before he gave up his office as secretary."

Dr. Work resigned as secretary of the interior to become chairman of the republican national committee.

half. With this we are here primarily concerned.

"Private business will soon follow such practical demonstration as the government may make since the great commercial interests of the country have the most vital stake. This may apply not only to construction, but to the renewal and extension of capital facilities of every sort. It is the considered recommendation of the one who has received the overwhelming mandate of the American people to guide and guard their progress in the next four years that a construction reserve may prudently be accumulated in time of plenty against the lean year that is to come.

"This involves simply the provision of the necessary funds or credit to be released when indexes shall indicate the need and such designation of projects as may commend itself to the authority concerned."

Governor Brewster told the governors that no infringement of legislative prerogatives was contemplated, because no project could be carried out except as the legislature might direct, although the rapidity of the construction program within defined limits could be accelerated or retarded to synchronize with national and local needs.

"Creation of such a construction reserve," he continued, "is one of the best forms of insurance against the panics of our past. It may not be a cure-all but it certainly will alleviate our ills. In some measure it is possible to do for employment what the federal reserve system has done for finance and with equal advantage to the country as a whole."

CAN TAKE SEAT AT ONCE, CONTENTION

their successors are elected and qualified.

The city charter provision, which is an amendment passed by the people in a special election of May 17, 1918, says:

"The aldermen shall be elected for a term of four years, and the other elective officers shall be chosen for a term of two years, beginning January 1 next after their election; providing, that when there is a vacancy in the office of alderman from any ward by reason of death, resignation or otherwise, the common council shall appoint a successor pro tempore who shall serve until his successor is elected at the next regular election and qualifies for the unexpired term."

At the city primary last May O'Hara and C. A. Hill were nominated for alderman to complete the unexpired term of B. F. Brunk. O'Hara was elected. In the light of the charter provision it appears that O'Hara should take his seat as soon as he has filed his oath of office, for Randall would then have served until his successor has been elected and qualified.

Thompson, who resigned from this unexpired term, was not a candidate in the primary to complete the term by election. Instead he ran to succeed George Wenderoth in the regular four-year term.

Mayor Livesley's proclamation last Monday night proclaims O'Hara elected for a two-year term. This supports the contention that O'Hara was elected to fill an unexpired term for the reason that all councilmen are elected for four years.

Vandevort's case is different from O'Hara's in that Vandevort in the primary was a candidate for a four-year term. At the time of the primary there had been no resignation from the first ward, and consequently there was no unexpired term to fill. After the primary, Alderman Engstrom resigned and Ed Schunke was appointed in his place. But no one has been elected to fill the unexpired term, which terminates the first of January, hence Schunke, it is believed, should complete the year.

O'Hara was non-committal when asked whether he was going to attempt to take his seat before the first of the year.

DECLARES CREW IGNORED ORDERS

course I have only first hand knowledge of what was happening on the starboard side. All of the officers were busy at their regular duties."

He said he gave one officer a command to get into one of the lifeboats and the officer walked away ignoring the command.

Johnston was taken over his complete list of duties on the Sunday and Monday that the Vestris first encountered trouble.

"I never noticed a list," he testified. "Of course in the summer time and in tropical waters the swimming tank is filled on the starboard side."

"It was not a cranky ship then?" Jessup asked.

"No."

"Then you noticed no list until 7:30 Sunday night?" Jessup asked.

"No."

"Why, then, did you heave to Sunday noon?"

"I thought it was on account of the wind."

"There was about an eight degree list at noon Sunday and this was due to weather conditions, I thought," the witness testified.

Johnston said he thought maybe the cargo shifting had caused some of the listing. He said there was not much cargo shifted but that it was sufficient to maintain a steady list.

"With the list steadily increasing, isn't it a fact that until you stop the list that the vessel is not safe?" Jessup asked.

"Yes."

"Was it not your duty to find out why the ship was listing?"

"I did try."

"You testified you heard the water running into the coal bunkers. Did you do anything about it?"

"There was no way to get to the bunkers, because of the coal. I reported to the captain and he came down Sunday morning and inspected it."

"Did you find out where the water was coming from?"

"No."

Johnston said he had inspected the Vestris in port and had looked over the side of the coal ports. He said he could have noticed if the covers were not properly screwed.

He said the new members of the crew had not been assigned to lifeboats yet but that every old member was provided with a card showing which boat he should go into.

"Were the lifeboats properly filled?" Jessup asked.

"I got away boats 1-3-5-7 and they were not properly filled."

"Why?"

"Because there was not sufficient time."

"How were relations between you and the captain?" Jessup asked.

"We were friends. At 4 a. m. Sunday I went to the engine room and the captain said it looked serious. At 10 a. m. I asked the captain if he had sent an SOS. He said he had."

"Why were you not in communication with the Voltaire?"

"I do not know."

When Jessup had finished questioning, United States District Attorney Tuttle again questioned Johnston. He asked why Johnston had not sent an SOS before 10 a. m. The witness was extremely vague and there were numerous questions until Johnson replied:

"I was relying on the gale to go down. This would have meant less water was entering the vessel."
