A total of 36,701 lunches were served in the three school cafeterias of Salem during the past year for which $6963.30 was paid, reports Mrs. Eula Creech, head of the home economics department, to Superintendent George W. Hug.

Twice as many lunches were served in the Parrish junior high school cafeteria as in either of the other two, says Mrs. Creech's report. At Parrish 18,709 lunches were served with receipts totalling $2378.88. Leslie junior high served 9730 lunches with receipts at $1343.60. At the senior high school cafeteria 6262 persons were served for 1441.82.

A slight profit remains in the treasury at the close of the year. This fund will be used to start the school cafeterias in the fall. An attempt is made to serve the food as nearly at cost prices as is possible.

Mrs. Creech recommends in her report that home administration be made a required subject for senior girls in high school. This course is not vocational, says Mrs. Creech but takes home and family problems as a content subject and requires as much "head" work as Latin. Since the college entrance requirements do not include as much mathematics, sciences and languages as formerly, Mrs. Creech suggests that there is room in the schedule for making the home administration course a requirement for girls.

RUSSIAN WAIFS NOW GONE FROM STREETS

Moscow (AP)—Homeless children, who used to infest Russian streets, working in gangs and stealing or robbing pedestrians, are rapidly disappearing. As a consequence one may traverse some of the wide streets now at night with reasonable expectation of arriving home without losing one's watch or purse.

In 1928 there were about 30,000 of these waifs in various cities. About 20,000 were picked up by various organizations last year and placed in institutions to be trained in useful work, fed and cared for until they have lost their gang instincts. More than 3,200 were rescued from the streets of Moscow alone.

For years the waifs were an unsolved problem. Most of them lost their homes and parents in the civil wars and revolutionary fighting, but some took to the streets by choice and these proved the most recalcitrant. Attempts by the commission of education to reclaim them by ordinary institutional methods failed because when the youngsters came to the routine lives they merely ran away.

A special committee appointed last year has had success with "communes of work." Four of these centers were opened—in Rostov, Orlo, the Saratov district and Stara-Tocherka. The Orlo commune, for example, owns a factory in which boys are taught to make harvesting machines. In other places they are trained as lock smiths, boiler makers and in similar trades.
