A Builder of Empire

Little comment has been forthcoming in the press over the recent death of Minor Cooper Keith, yet he was an empire builder in all that it implies, for it was he who built the railroads of Central America, planted the great banana plantations to give them tonnage and brought American industrialism into the easy-going Caribbean countries.

Minor Keith was born in Brooklyn in 1848, went to Central America while still a youth to embark in the lumber business. Afterwards for two years he entered the cattle business in Texas in the days of the long-horns, later returning to Costa Rica to engage in railroad building.

Minor Keith was a self-made man, going from a Brooklyn lumber yard to make his fortune in the southland of North America. In spite of his varied and extensive interests, his diplomacy was such that he never had to call for the Marines or a warship to settle a dispute.

The introduction of the banana and the coming of the railroads have worked an economic and industrial revolution in these countries of Central America. The old Indian crafts are disappearing before the invasion of the cheap products of American factories, and an ancient and picturesque culture seems doomed.

The Fear of God

In the current issue of Colliers, the Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Public Morals advocates calling out the armed military and naval forces of the United States to enforce prohibition laws, in other words a civil war to put the fear of God into the minds of Volstead violators.

Dr. Wilson advocates prison sentences for first violation, equal penalties for buyers of liquor with sellers, manufacturers or shippers, and drastic padding legislation. He declares martial law should have been declared in Maryland and New York because of the attitudes of Governor Smith and Ritchie in opposing state enforcement acts and intimates the executives should have been hung as traitors.

There is nothing in the Constitution about "putting the fear of God" into people as a chief function of government. Nor is there anything in the Sermon on the Mount, which is supposed to be the inspiration of the Christian clergy—on the contrary the latter teaches love of fellowmen instead of hate, and forgiveness of the transgressor instead of prison.

Dr. Wilson is an eloquent exponent of fanaticism. He has entered politics to make the dogma of his particular church law of the land and now seeks to make its violation a capital offense and even counsels civil war to enforce obedience through military tyranny.

FIRST PLACE IN 'AD' INFLUENCE TO NEWSPAPERS

New York, (United Press).—Newspaper advertising influences a greater portion of the buying public than all other advertising media combined, according to a survey conducted by Dean Robert A. Johnson of the College of Business Administration, Marquette University, results of which are made public in the current issue of "Sales Management" magazine. The survey conducted in Milwaukee, consisted of interviews with approximately 300 persons of both sexes and of all ages and occupations, representing a typical cross section of American life.

The results show that the public regards newspaper advertising the undisputed leader in effectiveness, with magazine second, billboards third, mail communications fourth and radio fifth. Car cards, motion pictures, received scattering mention.

Selecting the most influential advertising medium, 144 persons named newspapers, 76 voted for magazines, 12 for direct advertising, 8 for bill boards, and 7 for radio.

Asked to name the second most effective medium, 97 voted for magazines, 64 for newspapers, 30 for bill boards, 20 for radio, and 16 for mail communications.

The survey figures also reveal what this group thinks of advertising as it affects the quality of goods.

You could go shopping with your eyes shut YOU could turn your back to the counter and yet be perfectly sure of getting the things you want. The exact quality of sheeting, or talcum powder, or candy, or soap, or furniture polish that you like best is handed to you instantly when you ask for it by name. You don't have to look, because you know that advertised brands will be precisely the same today as they were yesterday. The fact that they are advertised guarantees that their quality will be maintained. Their makers have placed themselves on record. Advertisements are honest products. It is the unadvertised things—the "just-as-goods" and the "almost the-sames" that are likely to vary in quality. You save money and you save time when you make a habit of buying standard goods—as advertised.
