Sips, taking local Kiwanians to task for their alleged pilfering of bread from the very mouths of Salem's professional florists by turning to the city's bountiful home gardens for flowers to bestow upon their visitors at next week's convention...

To digress briefly and to clear the record, we quote members of the floral committee for the coming convention to the effect that the Kiwanians did not ask contributions of flowers.

Perhaps we should only "Say It With Flowers" sentimentalized with commercial trade-marks. Or shall we erect over each home-grown posie a placard proclaiming to our friends and guests that our solicitude for the struggling professionals moves us to dedicate each amateur blossom as a sacrifice to the prosperity of the florists?

And you, girls, who sometimes pin a rose upon the boy friend's lapel could with consideration accompany it with the business card of your favorite florist.

Something big and vital must be done to curb a threatened congestion of the courts of bankruptcy and homes for the destitute with flower merchants ruined by the gratuitous distribution of pretty posies that carry cheer but no profit.

And while you are solving this delicate and all-important problem, Sips and I will keep right on advertising the fact that the Garden Club needs more pretty flowers to pin on and around some 1500 visiting Kiwanians and their wives.

That is, we will until the boss returns from his vacation and reminds us that white paper and black ink cost money, and that the pearls of wisdom we drop fall with a sodden thud. —HARRY N. CRAIN.

INDIAN KILLER EVADES POLICE OVER 3 YEARS

Kokomo, Ind. (AP)—Fear is hampering authorities here in their attempt to capture William Carson, Kokomo's notorious "phantom killer," wanted for the murder of his father three years ago and believed implicated in the recent killing of Alonzo Whalen, an acquaintance, who had notified police of the fugitive's whereabouts.

The fear is not held by the officers but by persons who might give clues to Carson's whereabouts. Whalen informed police Carson was living across the street from him August 2, last. Now Whalen is dead—shot as he sat in a rocking chair at his home—and officers are saying "Carson's on the warpath again."

Carson is alleged to have fatally shot his father, Clinton Carson, when the latter refused him money. At that time he was a fugitive, being wanted for an attack on Virgil Shouse, a deputy sheriff.

The killer is audacious and lucky. When police, acting on Whalen's tip, surrounded his home last year, Carson used his wife's body as a shield in making his escape.

Carson's wife still loves him. She makes her home here with her baby, Betty Lou, but her acquaintances declare she would join her husband "in a minute" if she could elude officers who shadow her continually.

In appearance, Carson looks anything but a killer. He is blond, handsome, suave and well-groomed. He is 29 years old, with dark blue eyes and rosy cheeks which had given him the reputation of a "lady killer" before he ran afoul of the law.

"Y" BACHELORS IN WASHINGTON DETAIL IDEAS

Washington, (AP)—Less necking, smoking and drinking, and more prudence and modesty are the improvements desired of the modern Miss by Y. M. C. A. bachelors here, according to answers received to a questionnaire distributed recently by association officials.

Division of opinion was sharp on marrying a girl "with a past." It was revealed. Fifteen were against having a girl disclose any "mistake she had made before marriage," while 11 thought everything should be told. Many indicated if they knew of the girl's past they would go through with the ceremony provided she had reformed.

HOSPITAL FOR DRUNKARDS OF MOSCOW TRIED

Moscow.—Habitual drunkards here, accustomed to walking up "the morning after" in a bleak jail, are astonished to find themselves instead in a spotlessly clean hospital, surrounded by nurses and doctors instead of policemen.

The Moscow health authorities have opened an Anti-Alcohol dispensary for the reception of inebriates picked up in the gutters. Its capacity is small and the majority of the drunkards cannot as yet partake of its hospitality, but if the experiment proves successful more stations will be opened.

The dispensary aims not merely to sober up its unconscious guests but to cure them. It operates on the theory that the drunkard is a "patient" and not a "felon."

CLIPPER SHIPS TRADITION LIVES ON IN MEMORY

New York (AP)—Indian house, faded, brownstone symbol of the time when Yankee clipper first streaked the sea, is stirred to the depths of its old foundations with prospects of a revival of American shipping.

When James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation and a group of friends organized the present Indian house society in 1914, their chief purpose was to provide a meeting place for men interested in foreign trade.

They had a second purpose and that was to keep alive memories of the day when American sailing ships held a leading place in the sea-borne commerce of the world.

Mr. Farrell donated a large number of rare ship models, old engravings and pictures. The late Willard Straight gave the new organization valuable Chinese art objects and his widow added a collection of 35 ship models.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Taylor and family of Tillamook attended the wedding of their cousin, Miss Bertha McCracken, Monday afternoon at her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Taylor, returned home with them to spend a few days.

SCOTT'S MILLS

Miss Grace Dart left suddenly Tuesday for Corvallis to be with her sister, Mrs. Edna Lotten, who is very ill. Edwin Lotten, son of Mrs. Lotten, and Mrs. J. Harvey Brougher and infant son of Clatskanie, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mulvihill and daughter, Ruby Harriett, of Portland, are here visiting relatives and friends. Mr. Brougher and Mrs. Mulvihill are son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Brougher of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Robinson and family and Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Dixon and family who have been spending a few days in Washington, have returned home.

Miss Eva Shilts of Black Rock visited her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Dunagan, recently. Her mother, Mrs. Myrtle Shilts, came after her.

Mrs. Forest Bartholomew and daughter of Portland, who have been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kent of this place, have returned home.
