FOSTER CONE IN LIST OF LIKELY J. P. CANDIDATES

The lure of the political plum which looms in the offing with the announcement of Brazier Small that he probably will not be a candidate for re-election to the office of justice of the peace in the Salem district is putting inspiration into the minds of a growing number of young local attorneys.

Cone is saying nothing beyond that the matter has been mentioned to him and he has given it some consideration, indicating that whether or not he enters the lists depends upon future development. Cone has been practicing law here for two years and for two years prior to that was a law student at Willamette university, where he received his degree. His legal education also included work at the University of Nebraska and the University of Oregon. He is secretary of the Marion county bar association.

CAUSE OF DEATH OF OYSTERS NOT SHOWN BY TEST

Olympia, Wash. (AP)—The cause of the declining productivity of oyster beds in Mason county which virtually wiped out a million dollar industry in three years, remains a mystery.

"No positive factors which would account for the deterioration of the adult oysters in Oakland bay have yet been brought to light," the lengthy 40 page report of Dr. W. H. Nightingale, sanitary engineer of the state health department, frankly stated.

More than 100 oystermen from Shelton, Willapa and other oyster growing section of the state were present at the open hearing. They were plainly disappointed with the results as they had expected the problem to be solved. The oystermen believed that a sulphite liquor which is emptied into Oakland Bay where the oyster beds were ruined, was solely responsible for the mortality of the oysters but the results of several tests proved this not to be the case.

LINDY SIGNS RUINS OF FOUR MAYA CITIES

Havana, (AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed here at 3:19 o'clock Thursday afternoon from Cosumel en route to Miami.

Dr. Cosumel, Quintana Roo, Mexico (AP)—Four ancient Maya cities, hitherto uncharted, were discovered Wednesday by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, his wife, and their companions in several hours flying in inland Quintana Roo.

The first was sighted within an hour after the party left Belize, British Honduras, and shortly after it crossed the Rio Hondo into the territory. Several definite mounds set about a triangular plot were found, and the location was mapped carefully, although it was too cloudy for photographing it.

Mrs. Lindbergh, wearing light knickers, high boots, blue shirt and a silk scarf about her head, herself discovered the second ruins which at first seemed just a bit of white wall glistening above the deep green of the bush. Three small towns finally were located nearby. Dr. A. V. Kidder, Carnegie Institute scientist believed them to be, probably, the center of a Maya city which flourished a millennium ago.

When the third city was discovered later in the afternoon Santa Cruz Indians beneath ran from the plane as it flew above them. Col. Lindbergh sighted the fourth ruin probably the most interesting find of the day, a great mound rising 60 or 70 feet above the ground, with its crumbling walls visible from as far as 22 miles away. Dr. Kidder described it as a perfect type of Maya empire edifice. Although the ruin was within 30 miles of Santa Cruz de Bravo, no human habitations were seen.
