KLAMATH TAX SUIT DROPPED

Klamath Falls, Ore. (AP)—Events in the Klamath county timber situation moved swiftly when Federal Judge Robert Bean signed an order dismissing the suit filed by five timber companies of the county. The county board of tax equality aligned an order settling the protest of a number of timber companies as originally made, granting some concessions, and sent a request to the state tax commission asking that they be surveyed and classified all property in the county.

The decree issued by Judge Bean ordered that all funds tendered into the federal court by the protesting timbermen who offered a partial payment be returned; that the sheriff of Klamath county exact no penalty or interest on account of failure to receive 1928 and 1929 taxes when due, but to accept them without interest if paid within 30 days after the issuance of the decree; that neither party is to recover costs in the federal court suit.

SMITH WILL CASE ORDERED DISMISSED

The supreme court Tuesday reversed Judge Perry R. Kelly in the case of Hugh B. Smith against Sylvia Smith Hyett and J. W. Hyett and the First National bank of Silverton, appellants, and ordered dismissal of the case.

This was a case involving the will of Smith's late wife, Addie G. Smith, bequeathing to her husband $100 in lieu of any interest in about 54 acres of land. It appears, however, that he had a right to elect to take a third interest in the land, but evidence indicated that he relinquished this right by his own signature.
