Recent fines in justice court assessed against motorists for driving cars with improper lights brought forth the explanation Thursday from Judge Smith that these fines are not being handed out indiscriminately. Almost in each instance the motorist whose lights have been checked by a traffic representative and found faulty, has been given a chance to have them remedied, the judge explained. The examining officer usually directs the motorist to have his lights fixed and then report to the justice of the peace within a certain time that this has been done. When drivers fail to do this, a warrant for their arrest is issued and a $10 fine usually follows. The judge expressed the opinion that it is much cheaper to remedy defective lights than it is to pay a fine.

DOG TEAMS SEEK MISSING PILOT IN ARCTIC AREA

Nome, Alaska, (AP)—Two dog teams will mush through the snow drifts from the ice bound trading ship Nanuk Thursday in search of Carl Ben Eielson, noted aviator who took off from Teller on November 9 with his mechanic, Crewland, but has not been heard from since. The radio operator of the Nanuk reported that Siberian eskimos arrived at the ship, saying that they heard noise of a plane overhead several days ago, about 60 miles from the Nanuk's position near Cape North. Spurred by this information, the dog teams will set out today in hopes of finding the airman safe.

On a previous successful flight to Nome, Alaska, the dog teams were forced down by inclement weather and stayed two weeks in cabin of a trader named Saroff, thirty miles off Cape Serdze. It is believed that because of poor visibility that the aviator may have set several days, the aviator may have set down his Aviator all-metal plane in the same region to await better flying conditions. Eielson had with him sufficient rations for 30 days, as well as a stove and other necessities for supporting life and no fears were held here for his safety.

It is estimated that should the dog teams from the Nanuk sight the aviator, it will be at least four days before the news will reach civilization but there is a possibility that with visibility prevailing today, Eielson will be able to make a safe take off and may reach the Nanuk before the searchers return, should his plane be undamaged.

GIRL FATALLY SHOT AT PARTY

Police said it appeared to be a case of accident here. They held Tulloch and William Whittle for questioning. Whittle shares with Tulloch the apartment in which the shooting occurred. Tulloch told the police that he and Hamilton had escorted the girl to dinner. When Young Hamilton left the party Tulloch said he and Mrs. Hawkins joined Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schomman and they went to the Tulloch-Whittle apartment to play bridge. Whittle also was present.

Tulloch said a round of drinks was served and that Mr. and Mrs. Schomman departed. He said that while a bridge game was in progress Mrs. Hawkins left the room for a moment, shortly afterward a shot was heard and Mrs. Hawkins was found in an adjoining room with a bullet in her right temple.

CRASH LEADS TO NEW RULES IN NEW YORK

New York (AP)—More stringent regulations to govern flying over New York City may be adopted, it appeared Wednesday, as a result of the fatal crash of a plane into an uptown building.

Charles I. Reid, booking agent and accident investigator, was horrified thousands who watched helplessly as the plane faltered in the skies and tumbled toward the crowded streets.

Robert J. Baillie, young red-haired lion tamer and lecturer, escaped by a parachute leap while the plane was 2000 feet above Broadway. The plane struck a new Y. M. C. A. building in 64th street, just west of Central park where the pilot had been in an attempt to make a forced landing.

Police Commissioner Grover Whalen indicated that only licensed commercial pilots with many hours of experience may be allowed to fly over the city.

Reid, a private pilot since last June, was renting planes from flying services in order to qualify for a higher pilot's rating from the department of commerce.

Baillie, who landed on a six story building directly across the street from the building where the plane was wrecked, was questioned for hours by police to ascertain details of the flight. A physician who examined him advised spending the night in a hospital to recover from the shock he had suffered.

"Reid had a parachute, but" supposed he was afraid to leave the plane to crash over New York. He stuck to the plane because he was that kind of a fellow," he said.

At Roosevelt field, where the plane was rented, officials declared that four other pilots had flown the ship during the day and had pronounced it in perfect mechanical order after landing.
