PIONEER LIFE SHOWN PUPILS IN CLASSWORK

Independence—The students of the sixth grade under the supervision of Mrs. Harry Keeney, illustrated in their class room this week, the early pioneer life of Oregon.

Both pupils and teacher were dressed in the fashion of that day, and presented a very colorful picture.

Several miniature beds, covered wagons and other articles made by the children were very interesting. Relics of the early days, such as wedding gown, cover-lids, wooden chairs, shaguna and riffs, powder horns, brass kettles and cooking utensils, candle moulds, sugar bowls, lanterns, were displayed, many of them over 80 years old.

The pupils of other grades and many patrons of the school, were admitted to inspect this exhibit.

This Oregon history project made a very creditable exhibit and also made lasting impressions upon the minds of those present, what our forefathers went through to make homes for those who came after.

★ A GIFT OF QUALITY AND WORTH

BOSCH RADIO

Christmas and everything that Christmas means are best reflected in remembrances which continue to give their full measure of pleasure and happiness long after the day itself has passed. That's why Bosch Screen Grid Radio is a glorious gift.

Bosch Screen Grid Radio heightens your enjoyment by reproducing the delicate shades of musical expression not ordinarily brought to you by radio.

Somehow, in the quiet, humless, natural reproduction of Bosch Radio, you catch the artist's vivid personality, delicate overtones, booming bass and highest treble, marvelously clear, wonderfully real—and every single shading of sound exactly as it is broadcast, because Bosch Radio has absolutely no tone of its own.

Of course, there is the strength to pick up distant stations. There is selectivity. There is precision engineering to the new screen grid tubes.

If you plan to make it a radio Christmas, by all means wear Bosch Screen Grid Radio. Then you, too, will know that less than Bosch performance and quality are unsatisfactory at any price, and you cannot buy more. Compare Bosch Screen Grid Radio side by side with any other make at any price. Make this comparative test today at your nearest Bosch Radio dealer.
