A Disappointing Report

The preliminary report of the Hoover Law Enforcement Commission is disappointing as it confines itself largely to suggestions for better enforcement of the law without making a scientific analysis of a great national problem. Nor does it stress the distinction between enforcement of prohibition and the enforcement of ordinary criminal law. This may come later, for the Commission says:

It is impossible wholly to set off observance of the prohibition act from the large question of the views and habits of the American people with respect to private judgment as to statutes and regulations affecting their conduct. To reach conclusions of any value, we must go into deep questions of public opinion and the criminal law. We must look into the several factors in the attitude of the people, both generally and in particular localities, toward laws in general and toward specific regulations. We must note the attitude of the pioneer toward such things. We must bear in mind the Puritan's objection to administration, the Whig tradition of a "right of revolution," the conception of natural rights, classical in our policy, the Democratic tradition of individual participation in sovereignity, the attitude of the business world toward local regulation of enterprise, the clash of organized interests and opinions in a diversified community, and the divergences of attitude in different sections of the country and as between different groups in the same locality. We must not forget the many historical examples of large-scale public disregard of laws in our past. To give proper weight to these things, in connection with the social and economic effects of the prohibition law, is not a matter of a few months.

The commission advised Congress, "if on no other ground than to give the law a fair trial," to mend four weak spots in prohibition enforcement by adopting the following measures, one of them requiring radical changes in legal procedure:

Transfer the investigation of prohibition violations and the preparation of cases against offenders from the Treasury to the Justice Department.

Codify all federal prohibition legislation.

Make padlock injunctions more effective.

Relieve congestion in the federal courts by one of three expedients; preferably by prosecuting "casual or slight" violations without indictment with penalty for such violations limited to $500 fine or six months in jail, which would require authorizing legislation by congress.

Evidently the Commission acted under presidential pressure, in refusing to analize the problem of prohibition as a question of national policy, thus ignoring the views of millions opposed to it on principle, which may be shrewd and ingenious political expediency but is not what the public expected. It has suggested nothing that was new, nothing except that which has already been proposed in Congress. It has ignored the real issue or at least passed the buck for the present. We know no more than if the investigation had not been made.

Corbett's Candidacy

Announcement that Henry Ladd Corbett of Portland will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor will be hailed with satisfaction by members of his party, for differing from many of the candidates, he is of gubernatorial stature and judging by his past record, would make an excellent governor. A member of one of the most distinguished pioneer families, Mr. Corbett, a son of United States Senator Henry W. Corbett, has served several terms as State Senator and made a satisfactory President of the Senate. He is widely known because of his investment and development enterprises in many sections of the state. His popularity in the metropolis is attested by the record votes he has polled for the Senate. He has sound business judgment, is familiar with the needs of the state, is young and energetic, has poise and commonsense.

The principal objection raised against Mr. Corbett will probably be the demagogic one of his wealth, which Bert Haney raised at the Jackson banquet when he declared that "it was time to cast overboard the first families and have a few first class funerals." But why wealth, intelligently utilized, should be a bar to political preferment, has never been satisfactorily demonstrated. If it had been, we would not have had Washington, Roosevelt, or Hoover as presidents.

The success of Mr. Corbett's candidacy hinges largely upon the health of Tom Kay, for should the latter make the campaign, he will draw largely from the same vote. With ten candidates in the field, it is anybody's campaign, which brightens the prospects of the Kandidate from Koos Kounty for using the Kapitol as a Klavern.

The Building Record

The annual building survey, compiled by S. W. Straus & Co., for 105 Pacific coast cities, shows that building construction fell off the past year in 61 of the cities, but with five of the cities showing an increase located in Oregon. They are Albany, Klamath Falls, Marshfield, Medford and Salem. The grand total of the building totalled $375,779,431 as against $404,904,563 in 1928.

The larger cities generally show a reduction in construction. Los Angeles fell off 8 percent, San Francisco 10 percent, Seattle 16 percent, Portland 7 percent, Oakland 26 percent, San Diego 6 percent. On the other hand Vancouver, B. C. gained 68 percent, Salt Lake 7 percent, Pasadena 17 percent, Long Beach 10 percent and Tacoma 2 percent.

The outlook generally is a good building year ahead, with news of many building projects being inaugurated or revived, "in anticipation of more ready financing than has been evident for many months". Restriction of construction during the past two years has added to the stability of demand.

We cannot look for a big building year in Salem, for our demands have been caught up with, until we secure more industries or the expansion of those we have. But there will be be considerable, much has already been outlined, and there is every prospect that Salem will maintain its steady growth.

The figures given for Oregon cities follow:

City	No.	Year, 1929 Cost	Year, 1928
Albany	93	$ 209,636	$ 201,705
Astoria	218	93,152	162,909
Baker	109	192,344	234,747
Eugene	696	831,722	1,276,683
Klamath Falls	630	1,759,810	835,047
Marshfield	115	145,855	119,335
Medford	259	650,976	553,997
Portland	7,790	15,692,310	21,275,970
Salem	654	2,053,792	1,932,443
Total	10,390	$21,199,819	$26,342,892

ROAD CONTRACT LET THURSDAY

Contracts to be let by the state highway commission at its meeting in Portland next Thursday will represent a larger expenditure of money than any other batch of contracts in seven or eight years, according to Roy A. Klein, state highway engineer. It is estimated that the contracts to be let will total around $1,250,000. No other group of contracts has totaled as high since the state was letting paving jobs under the highway bond program.

Included in the list will be a contract for the construction of the bridge over Rogue river at Gold Beach on the Roosevelt coast highway.

Other bids received will cover 27.1 miles of broken stone resurfacing on the Jenny Creek-Keno section of the Green Springs highway in Jackson and Klamath counties; 21 miles of resurfacing on the Nimrod-Belknap Springs section of the McKenzie highway in Lane county; construction of a ferry slip and one mile of embankment on the Yaquina Bay-South Beach section of the Roosevelt highway in Lincoln county; 3.9 miles of concrete paving on the Multnomah county line-Beaverton section of the Tualatin highway in Multnomah county; 10 miles of construction in two units of the Barnhouse Ranch-Picture Gorge section of the Ochoco highway in Wheeler and Grant counties; a bridge over Beaver creek on the Columbia river highway about 6¼ miles west of Rainier.

GAMES

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The most popular game of all, suggested by John, was Prisoners' Base.

They took places on each side of the picnic grounds which were upon the great landing deck in the air, and there was no danger of falling off because of huge railings.

Then Peggy suggested "Still-Pond-No-More-Moving" and they thought that was a nice game, too. They had never played it before!

They all knew tag, although one of them said it was more fun to run races in their planes.

However, they all seemed to enjoy this a lot, and when they had finished running races on the air picnic grounds and playing tag, they had the most delicious of drinks made from some syrup and foam gathered from the clouds.

John and Peggy found it something like ice cream soda and yet more delicious.

After the games and refreshments everyone went off in the different planes, and the pilot took John and Peggy and the Little Black Clock back to the earth again.

"I don't believe mother would ever let me own a plane until I grew up, no matter how far in the future we lived," said John.

"Why I saw a little girl, not much older than my age," said Peggy, "and she was in a plane with another girl only a few years older."

"You've certainly turned the time way, way, way ahead this trip," said John to the Little Black Clock.

"That's what I did," the Little Black Clock said as he took them home once more.

"But next time we're going to go back years and years and years. Remember! I'll be waiting for you Monday evening!"

"We'll remember," the children said.

WRITING PICTURES

The Little Black Clock, with his magic powers of turning the time forward or backward, was doing as he had promised and was turning the time way, way back.

Only a little while back the children had gone to a picnic with him up in the air, and now he had turned the time so far back that there were no houses around, and people were living in caves.

The people looked like others the children had seen before when the Little Black Clock had turned the time way, way back. They didn't say very much, and they seemed to have such an empty sort of a world in which to live!

Now the children saw some of these people drawing pictures on their caves.

The pictures were not so very remarkable. They were not much better than pictures John and Peggy could draw, but it was such fun to watch those grown-up people making pictures on their caves.

John and Peggy watched one man making a picture of a goat, and another was making a picture of a pony, and they made these pictures by using a sharp piece of stone on the rock of their caves.

"You're seeing the very first writing in the world," said the Little Black Clock.

"Up to this time there has been nothing written. No one has known how to write. No one at all!

"But these people are trying to put their words down in writing, and as they have no letters as yet they are drawing pictures to show what words they mean.

"The man who cut the picture of the goat is doing as you would do if you wrote down the word 'goat.'"

The children thought how wonderful it was to be able to write this way without having to learn how to spell or write letters, and yet they thought it might be difficult not to have any more writing than this.

It was rather a puzzling question!
