MYSTERY SHROUDS CLOSED CAR TRYST

its occupants, a man and a woman, didn't leave the car. No one thought much about it then, but when the same thing happened day after day, folks began to wonder. And it is still happening.

Usually the Colorado sedan arrived quite early in the morning. The man and the woman stay in the car, apparently talking quietly together. Never have they spoken to anyone else—except the two cops, and they sealed the lips of the cops. Sometimes the mysterious visitors bring their lunch and eat from a basket at noon. Sometimes they bring a basket dinner for the evening meal, and eat it in the car. At times they have driven away at noon and returned after lunch. Sometimes the man smokes an after-lunch cigar.

They are a good-looking pair, say the neighbors. They dress well enough, and their car is as good as the average on a downtown street. They cause no trouble. They attend strictly to their own business. D and Winter street intersection is public property. They have a right there. No one denies it. But, gosh! How the folks there wish they knew what it's all about.

Once when an officer was called he talked quietly with the pair for a minute or so, then went away. The man who had called the policeman went to headquarters and sought out the officer to find out the result of his investigation.

"Them people are all right," said the officer, poker-faced.

Again an officer was called, some days later. He opened the door of the sedan, and the women who were peeking from their curtains tried to guess what was being said. They saw the man take a paper from his pocket and hand it to the officer. The cop glanced at it and handed it back—then he sauntered away. Someone hunted up that cop also to find out what he knew. The cop shrugged, looked far away, said nothing. And his questioner went home to disappoint his family and friends who thought he might bring the answer.

Some think they are detectives. Others guess they are a pair of lovers who are lured by the romantic atmosphere at D and Winter streets. Some who think along more drab lines have an idea that they are sizing up the traffic in the neighborhood with the possibility of setting up some kind of business out there.

Anyway, it's a mystery. And Salem hasn't had a mystery for some time.

PLANS TO BUILD 5 APARTMENT HOUSES

room apartments. The investment will be around $50,000. They will be owned exclusively by Hansen.

One of the structures will face on Capitol street over the excavation made by Adam Engle a few years ago when he intended to duplicate his apartments a block or so south on Capitol street. However, Hansen states that his plans and designs will be entirely different than those which Engle had planned to use in the first instance. The other apartment will face on Nebraska avenue just across the alley to the east of the building on Capitol street. Both will be of the same style, equipment and interior finish.

The two apartment houses will be heated by a central steam heating plant. Every apartment will have electric refrgieration, electric stove, with latest toilet and bath facilities and every other modern device used in apartment houses.

In addition to the 20 apartments 20 garages for use of the tenants will also be built on the property.

A. M. Hansen and Henry Carl another set of apartments in the city on Chemeketa street near 12th street.

"As soon as the city council passes on the permit which I understand will be at the next meeting we will go ahead as rapidly as possible," stated Hansen. "I intend to make these apartments of a design which will make them a very attractive addition to this prominent street."

CASTLE ONCE BET ON SNAIL IS SOLD

London, (UP)—Hornby castle, a famous old landmark at Bedale, Yorkshire, once changed as the result of a race between two snails. It has again changed hands for something like $1,000,000.

Some 250 years ago the owner of Hornby castle bet the castle and 15,000 acres of land that a snail he owned could outpace any snail the Duke of Leeds of that time could produce.

The challenger, to increase the lead his snail soon gained, pricked it with a pin. The snail, instead og going faster, retired into its shell, allowing the Duke's snail to win.

Now, the present Duke of Leeds has sold the castle and the whole of his Yorkshire estates, about 5,850 acres, to John Todd, of Brampton, Northallerton, a well-known livestock breeder. The price is said to be between $1,000,000 and $1,250,000.

EVIDENCE IMBIBED WHILE COPS WAIT

Weymouth, Mass. (UP)—For some time local police had contemplated raiding an alleged speakeasy but as policemen were well known they found it difficult to secure evidence.

Finally a citizen was found who consented to enter the establishment and make a purchase. Before he went in he was handed two dollars. Six officers concealed themselves outside, ready and eager to do their duty when their scout emerged with the evidence.

In bitter cold they waited, stern men bound by duty to wait. As they waited they thought of nice things to say to their friend when he came out. This warmed them somewhat.

Then he came out. They picked him up from the sidewalk where he had fallen and took him to the station house. He was locked up charged with drunkenness.

SNAKE BITE TOWN EARNED ITS NAME

Windsor, N. C., (UP)—Snake Bite township has one of the most original names in Bertie county. Judge Francis D. Winston, widely known story teller, said the township received its name in the following manner:

Years ago, in a field now a part of Snake Bite township, members of the state guard used to drill.

One day, Bugamore Bazemore, a member of the company, saw a large king snake wriggling through the grass. He caught the snake and started to put it on his comrades. One of the soldiers resented the act.

Brazemore claimed the snake was harmless and declared he would bite its head off for a quart of brandy. A soldier produced the brandy and Bazemore bit off the snake's head.

That section has been known as Snake Bite township ever since.

WILL TRASK ILL

Stayton—Dr. B. R. Wallace of Albany was here this week on a professional visit to see Will Trask, who has been sick and growing weaker all the time. It is reported he has cancer of the liver. His son Floyd Trask, who is employed at Dee near Hood River, was again called to come to his bedside and arrived Tuesday night. He had recently spent some time here but returned home about 10 days ago.

SCIO P.-T. MEETS

Scio — The February meeting of the Scio Parent-Teacher association was held at the high school auditorium Thursday evening. Routine business and a number of pupils of Miss Fanning's grades occupying the attention of the meeting.

HIGH DEGREE ACCURACY

Washington (AP)—First order triangulation, a term used in government map-making, means accuracy to within one part in 300,000.
