

WASHINGTON'S FUNERAL TOLD IN OLD PAPER

Bryson City, N. C. (AP)—Accounts of the death and burial of George Washington and return of Napoleon to France from Egypt, are included in the Saturday, January 4, 1800, issue of the Kingston, Ulster county, N. Y., Gazette, in possession of Mrs. Anne D. Bryson, of Bryson City.

The old Gazette contained messages of condolence from the House and Senate and the statement of President John Adams. As a mark of respect, the Gazette, a folded sheet of four pages, carried a half-inch border of black around the inside of the publication with a four-inch line of black between the second and third pages.

Under the caption, "Washington Entombed, George Town, Dec. 20," the Gazette read:

"On Wednesday last, the mortal part of Washington the Great—the Father of His Country and the Friend of Man, was consigned to the tomb with solemn honors and funeral pomp. A multitude of persons assembled from many miles around, at Mount Vernon, the choice abode and last residence of the illustrious chief. There were the graves—the majestic avenues, the beautiful and sublime scenes, the noble mansions—but alas the august inhabitant was now no more. The great soul was gone. In the lofty portico, where oft the Hero walked in all his glory, lay the shrouded corpse. . . . On the ornament at the head of the coffin was inscribed, Surge ad judicium—about the middle of the coffin, Gloria Deo—and on the silver plate his name and date of death.

"Between three and four o'clock, the sound of artillery on the river, firing minute guns, awoke our solemn sorrow—the corpse was removed—a band of music with mournful melody melted the soul into all the tenderness of woe.

"The pall bearers were Coles, Sims, Ramsey, Payne, Gilpin, Marshall, and Little with members of Masonic brethren and citizens, with the 'cavalry, infantry, guard, with arms reversed and clergy, music, with the General's horse with his saddle, holsters and pistol, preceding them."

"In his message to both the House and Senate, President Adams said: 'I feel myself alone, bereaved of my last brother. His example is now complete, and it will teach wisdom and virtue to magistrates, citizens and men, not only in the present age, but in future generations, as long as our History shall be read.'

"Paris, Oct. 14—Bonaparte and Berthier are in France at the very moment when the fame of their triumph at Paris, they disembarked at Frejus. It appears that he was afraid of being taken by English had been attempted to land at Toulon. The frigate in which he came was escorted by two vessels. On reaching the shore, Bonaparte and Berthier and all who were with him, fell down and kissed the land of liberty."

STONE MASON FAILS AS BARBER STUDENT

Rock Springs, Wyo. (AP)—After a hard day's work in coal mines, Mike Bugack often used to sit in a barber's chair and reflect upon the ease of that occupation in comparison with his. He decided to become a barber. He even put in two weeks in a barber's college in Denver, learning to develop a velvet touch in shaving. Then, when he advanced to the haircutting class, he was balked.

Mike's right thumb had been abnormally enlarged during his years of labor as a stone mason and a miner. It would not slip into the handle of a scissors. He hunted in vain for a scissors large enough to hold the thumb, and finally had to give up thoughts of leading a life of ease behind a barber's chair.

EX-RULERS AND DOGS SENT TO EXILE ISLAND

London, (U.P.)—From the days of the Byzantine Empire down to the present time the Island of Prinkipo, only a few miles from Constantinople, in the sea of Marmora, has been an exile-home for the banished leaders of lost causes, for persons whose great power had dwindled to a life of helplessness.

At present Leon Trotsky, who only a few years ago was the master of the greatest army of post-war Europe and who shared with Lenin the rule over the Russians, is ill in his exile home on Prinkipo Island, which also has become the home of exiled dogs.

For in spite of the fact that at least three empresses of great Byzantine were banished to this island, today it serves as a home for unwanted dogs, which the Turkish government decided to send there when they cleared the streets of Constantinople.

One of the celebrated exiles on the island was the Byzantine Empress Zoe, who never married until she was 40 years of age and then made up for lost time by marrying three husbands in a few years. Then she adopted a young man as her heir. This was a young man, for as soon as the young man got the power he sent the acting empress to the island in banishment.

The Empress Euphrosyne also spent considerable time on Prinkipo, but the most interesting and important of the exiles on the island was the Empress Irene, wife of Leo IV.

It was this lady who had the eyes of her son, Constantine VI, stabbed out because he tried to regain the imperial power to which he was entitled by the laws of the Empire. It was this Irene who tried to negotiate a marriage between herself and Charlemagne in an effort to restore the Roman Empire. On the island she was even deprived of the bare necessities of life and the would-be bride of the Emperor of the West was forced to earn her scanty living by spinning.

CO-EDS LIKED SILK, BUT SILK SOX WON

Salt Lake City, (U.P.)—Coeds at Utah university, opposing against the use of silk stockings in gymnasium work, went back to the cotton variety, but to overcome un-sightliness, they wear half sox, and roll 'em down.

The reason for discarding silk was not economic; it was psychological. Trichopticon, a skin disease, well known to athletes, invaded the women's shower room. Silk stockings are an animal product friendly to the trichopticon; cotton sox are said to be quite repulsive to the animal.

LAW'S RELATION TO SOCIAL LIFE TOPIC

Santa Barbara, Cal. (U.P.)—Social workers, attorneys and governmental officials will discuss the relationship of law to social progress, at the California conference of social workers, to be held in Santa Barbara, May 13 to 17.

Justin Miller, dean of the law school at the University of Southern California and president of the conference, in announcing the general topic for discussion, pointed out that with the current national emphasis being given law enforcement problems, the discussion was exceedingly timely.

Better understanding of the problems confronting lawyers, officials and social workers would be fostered, and a better cooperation between them, would result, Miller stated.

Various subjects will be discussed by the conference, all from the point of view of social progress and the law. Among the topics will be: Family and child welfare; industry, delinquency, public health, racial and citizenship problems; recreation, education and problems of relief administration.

More than 1000 persons are expected to attend the conference, the sessions of which will be open not only to members but also to any interested persons.

FREAK FARMING MAKE POSSIBLE SIDE SHOW ACTS

Seattle, (U.P.)—The nature study class will now convene.

First the calf of two heads with but a single neck will be considered. Then the Rotarian chicken that spells service with a Capital S, and the hen that lays them two-in-one will be discussed.

They are all freaks that have been reported by western Washington farmers.

"Moo-dusa," is the name bestowed on a heifer calf owned by E. Salvadana, Snohomish county farmer, that was getting fat after a week's life with two heads. The calf has four eyes, the inner two of which are sightless.

When the calf eats, a disappointed mouth worked just as hard as the other, so the owner had made a special bottle to feed both at once.

That Rotarian hen gives prompt delivery of eggs, strictly fresh and no extra charge.

Every morning E. C. Hardison hears a scratching and pecking at his door. He opens it and in walks Biddy, his pet Rhode Island Red hen. Biddy goes over by the stove and lays her egg, saving Hardison the trouble of going out to the barnyard to collect it for his ham. She does it six days a week and rests the seventh.

When Biddy became famous, J. A. Billings told of a hen on his farm that laid a big egg. When he broke it he found within another of normal size with a hard shell and all the other parts.

Silverton—Mrs. Robert Gourlie of the north side who has been visiting her daughter, Lucy at Indio, Calif. since the first of February, returned home Saturday. Mrs. Gourlie spent two weeks in Los Angeles and while there accidentally met Mrs. White, who had a millinery store here some years ago.

GOGGLES WITH POWDER ODOR SOLVE KILLING

Reykjavik, Iceland, (U.P.)—A pair of goggles and a box of face powder are not among the things that usually come to one's mind when thinking of Iceland.

Neither is murder, cold blooded brutal murder, the hammering of a man to death with a heavy pipe. Yet the third murder in Iceland in 60 years was solved largely through the fact that he murderer dropped a pair of goggles at the scene of the crime and bought a new pair, and both smelled of the same face powder.

Murder in Iceland, the land of fjords, frost and fire. The land from which Leifur, son of Eirikur the Red, discovered "Wineland the Good," or America. The history of Iceland is crowded with battles and bloodshed, but the present peaceful population could hardly believe the report that travelled over the island one bright morning, that a respectable citizen of Reykjavik had been attacked during the night, robbed, brutally beaten and murdered. It was the third killing in over half a century.

Jon Egilsson, bachelor, 41, conducted with his brother a motorcar agency and repair shop, situated on the outskirts of the town but facing the main thoroughfare. On the night of the murder Egilsson went to bed as he was accustomed to, sleeping alone in the building.

At 10 o'clock the next morning he was found dead in his bedroom, barefooted and almost naked, his head horribly battered. About $500 in cash was missing from the company's safe. The weapon with which Egilsson was murdered was a bar of brass.

Detectives who first examined the room noticed one very unusual thing; the killer had left his goggles and the brass bar behind, but he had taken time to wash his hands before leaving the scene of the crime.

The Chief of Police of Reykjavik, Hermann Jonasson, took charge of the case personally and worked it out according to his own ideas, for there are no real specialists on criminology in a community with so few criminals. All the employees of Egilsson's firm were questioned, but apparently they all had perfect alibis. Finally a chauffeur, Egil Hjalmarsson, attracted the particular attention of the detectives because he had a new pair of goggles. He claimed that he had been out late the night before driving a party into the country, and that when he got home at about two o'clock in the morning he went direct to bed.

This part of the story was true. He did go straight to bed, but got straight out again, and was away from his room for a long time. Hjalmarsson could not explain how he got several scratches on his face. And then a detective examined the new goggles. Goggles are not usually perfumed, but these had the same scent as the pair found beside Egilsson's body. The new goggles were found in a drawer, next to a box of face powder.

Little more than 12 hours after Egilsson died, the police had sufficient evidence to arrest Hjalmarsson. He was taken into custody the same evening and charged by the Chief of Police the following day. Hjalmarsson confessed and thus the crime was solved in little more than a day and a night.

The murderer is now awaiting sentence and is liable to sentence to prison for life—capital punishment was abolished in Iceland some time ago. Reports on the sanity of the prisoner may influence the sentence.

BIG REDUCTION TRAFFIC DEATHS CONVENTION AIM

Oakland (U.P.)—Undertaking the ambitious task of reducing California's tragic toll of traffic fatalities and accidents, more than 500 delegates will gather here April 24 for the opening of the state-wide public safety convention.

Governor C. G. Young, who has officially sanctioned the work of the California Committee on Public Safety, under whose auspices the conference will be held, will head the list of speakers.

To reduce the unnecessarily large toll of human lives and the economic waste attendant on traffic disruption, is the aim of the conference. The need of co-operative effort is illustrated by a study of traffic statistics:

There was one death for every thousand motor vehicles registered in California last year. The ratio of deaths to registration in the entire country was only slightly larger than California's ratio.

In California a total of 2,243 were killed by automobiles in 1929, as compared with 1,869 in 1928, an increase of 20 per cent.

In 1928 there were 1,719 deaths in accidents involving automobiles only, while in 1929 there were 2,058, an increase of 23%.

A like increase occurred in accidents involving automobiles and street cars and trains, 125 such deaths having occurred in 1929, as compared with 55 in 1928.

The increase in accidents involving automobiles and street cars was not so conspicuous, 60 such deaths having occurred in 1929, as against 55 in 1928.

In 1929 267 children under 15 years of age were killed in automobile accidents. In 1928 224 children were killed.

About 12 per cent of all deaths occurring in automobile accidents both in 1928 and 1929 were of children under 15 years old.
