SAFETY DRIVE IN SWIMMING OPENS JULY 1

Scio—The swimming and life-saving campaign, carried on annually by the Red Cross, will open July 1 and continue to August 31, according to Lucille Montgomery of Albany, secretary of the Linn county chapter of the organization, who was in Scio on official business this week. Harry Harvie will again have charge.

Special swim week will be held from August 4 to 9, probably at Albany, Miss Montgomery stated. During the two months' campaign regular meetings will be held at Scio, Lebanon, Mill City, Peoria, Brownsville, Harrisburg, and Albany, a day each week at the places named. Harvie served in Linn county in this capacity last year, and has been identified with the work for several years.

Charitable work demands much of Miss Montgomery's time and attention, and the problems of the present unemployment situation have increased her official activities perceptibly, she stated in Scio this week. Not only cases growing out of the World war but many other meritorious subjects come within her work from month to month and the prospects for the immediate future do not promise a lull in any respect, she says.

Regular meetings of the executive committee of the county chapter are held in Albany on the first Tuesday of each month. Report of the secretary and other activities of the organization are considered and plans made for the continuance of the work.

Presentation of the award of merit to Harry Wesely, former Scio youth, is to be formally and officially made in the near future, Miss Montgomery announced. Young Wesely last summer rescued a 10-year-old Portland girl who was about to drown while bathing in Thomas creek near Scio. The medal will be presented at a meeting of Boy Scouts either in Salem or Albany, it is announced. The Weselys now reside in Salem.

Bone of Contention Bone Threatens Peacefulness Of Many Amity Residents

Amity—General interest was aroused here this week when the Bank of Amity placed in its display window a section from the heart of a recently cut tree in which a bone was firmly imbedded. The oddity was discovered in a tree near the present site of the Amity Baptist church. The tree which had stood there for well over a century was being cut into cordwood.

What was at first merely idle speculation on the part of Amity citizens in regard to the find later changed to a cremonious debate on the subject. A decided rift in the local lute seemed inevitable as two opposing factions, each ready to do battle in defense of its own theory, began a clamor of arguments.

Those who stood firm in the belief that the bone of contention was the very one with which Sampson slew the Phillistines were offset by others championing the supposition that it was a part of the skeleton of a side-hill hodag—which in early days was known to roam the Yampo foothills and terrorize the neighborhood.

Fortunately for the peace of the community Prof. O. Houre Spoutz, philosopher and sage of Salt creek, was induced to inspect the curiosity and settle one and for all the much-mooted question. When asked if he thought it possible that the bone could have been inserted in the ancient fir recently and by human hands, Prof. Spoutz ridiculed the suggestion.

The bone, declared the local savant, was at one time a joint of the tail on the famed Blue Ox, owned by Paul Bunyan and Prof. Spoutz chanced to be an eye-witness of the accident which caused its loss. On the day in question the professor had just completed his task of cleaning the great lamp in the lighthouse at the mouth of Ash Swale and he and Bunyan were visiting while Babe, the ox, was grazing nearby. A woodpecker lit upon the bovine hip-bone and began to drill, which so ruffled the great brute that he swung the mighty tail against a sapling fir with such force as to amputate the end of it and imbed it in the wood.

When Prof. Spoutz concluded his explanation given an ovation in appreciation of the way in which he had ended civic discord and made Amity once again "the city of friendship."
