YOUTH TAKES BLAME FOR PETTY THEFTS

Taking the blame for the entire affair, Theron Randall, 17 year old youth, admitted in justice court Monday that he took the several coats, and a woman's purse, a hat and other objects during the latter part of September, which resulted last Friday night in the arresting of Randall and Roy and Charles VanVleck in a house at Norway and Capitol streets. However, all three involved in the deal were accused in a complaint with stealing and receiving stolen property. They were returned to the county jail when they failed to produce $1,000 bail demanded of each.

SURVIVOR, RESCUER TELLS OF CRASH

"I started to crawl on my hands and knees. Something barred my way and I touched it, burning my hand to the bone. It was a grider, red with heat. As I crawled I saw other men suffering intensely from burns but they were trying to return to the flames to help the others. "In vain I attempted to pull them back, but they broke away and ran to the front of the ship. It looked like madness but I followed them. "We smashed our way into the forward cabin and found it unoccupied without an occupant. Oddly enough there was a clock still running. "Despite the terrible heat, which made us gasp for breath, the trio sought repeatedly to cut into the blazing wreckage. Through a window we saw one man seeking to escape from his cabin. Five times we tried to get him and five times we failed. Finally we saw the flames overtake him.

BOARD PROBES LOSS OF AIR LEVIATHAN

gale the crash and destruction of the British air leviathan, R-101, south of here Sunday morning in one of the greatest air catastrophes of all time. Gendarmes guarded the doors of their meeting place and kept their deliberations strictly private. Meanwhile, controversy raged as to how many persons were aboard the ship at the time of the disaster and as to how many lives were lost. Beauvais police asserted they had accounted for 48 dead, of whom one possibly was a woman, out of 55 aboard the craft. The air ministry at London reiterated in reply, there were 54 persons aboard, one died afterwards, and the dirigible, one died within the dirigible, one died afterwards, and the survivors were saved. The air ministry denied there was a woman aboard.

HOOPER ADDRESSES LEGION CONVENTION

had concluded, Comander Bodenhamer presented him with a solid gold watch. The president accepted solemnly while the convention cheered once more. Boston (AP)—President Hoover told the 12th annual convention of the American Legion here Monday that the "peace of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment" and the realization of the Legionnaires' ideal to promote peace and goodwill through active citizenship is the greatest guaranty of its continuance. Facing hundreds of world war veterans at the Boston arena, Mr. Hoover urged the Legion to "renew and expand" its mission of citizenship through the teaching in every community of the essentials of good-will toward foreign peoples, that the foundations of government is respect for law, and the road to self-government is through "discharge of our obligations at the ballot box."

LEGION OPENS CONVENTION IN BOSTON ARENA

The annual convention of the American Legion was called to order here at 9:50 a. m. by National Commander C. J. Bodenhamer. The big convention hall presented a gay picture, its roof beams hung with bunting and flags, the floor crowded with the bright colored caps and uniforms of delegates. On the speakers' platform were a group of boxes for the distinguished guests and among the first of these to arrive was General Henri Gouraud of France. A cheer went up as the bearded, one-armed veteran appeared and shook hands with Ed Platt, Andrew, representative in congress and himself a veteran of French army service in the world war. Behind the center dais the Electric post band of Milwaukee, 1929 champion Legion band, filled in with gas music. Prepared to greet President Hoover as their guest and speaker delegates were in their seats early and there were several in the national commander's gavel fell. Thousands more crowded the streets of old Boston and other thousands were pouring into the city. Legion officials estimated upwards of 100,000 legionnaires, members of their families and friends were in the city. National Vice Commander Frank Shoble Jr., who lost both eyes in action in France, made an eloquent plea for the Legion to rededicate itself to liberty, justice and democracy. Just prior to his address the convention accorded former President and Mrs. Coolidge and General Henri, French war hero, a vociferous welcome. General Pershing won another ovation. The Rev. George F. Kettell, D. D., national chaplain, pronounced the invocation, the services at 10:30 a. m. The national colors, and then Governor Frank D. Allen, on behalf of Massachusetts, welcomed the Legionnaires to the state. "The governor made a plea against sectionalism. He saw the Legion as a great instrument for leveling geographic barriers of provincial prejudices and of sectionalism. He labeled it as a league of mutual understanding and cooperation." Mayor James M. Curley prefaced his welcome by presenting Commander Bodenhamer with a "constitutional pin stick," a cane made from the wood of an elm tree which grew on the Lexington battlefield. Just before President Hoover of Council Bluffs, Iowa, national president of the American Legion auxiliary and ex-Snapper Ingram, Chief de Chemin de Fer of the 49 and 8 brought the greetings of their respective organizations. "The whole plan of self-government," he said, "presupposes that the whole people shall participate in the selection of its officials, the determination of its policies, and the maintenance of its ideals. Anything less than this involves government by the minority."

A few minutes later I and some neighbors were on the scene. The airship had fallen into an orchard on top of some apple trees. Oh, what a terrible sight met our eyes. The flames were rising skyward and in vain firemen played hoses on the blazing ship. "We could see bodies in the cabins which seemed to be twisted like chunks of burned cheese. We were able to save one man who was alone in the forward cabin. At the present moment he is walking about Beauvais with three others all of whom were slightly injured.
