GEORGE ARLISS STARS AGAIN IN CHARACTER ROLE

George Arliss, remembered for his artistic characterizations in "Disraeli" and "The Devil," brought a new bit of his artistry back to the Elsinore for Salem's enjoyment Monday in the first showing of "Old English," which is to be the headline attraction there through Tuesday and Wednesday.

The picture is another triumph for Arliss, ranking with his big achievements of the past.

In the hands of an exceptionally able cast the screen version of this greatest of Arliss stage successes, bids fair to become his greatest motion picture.

The Galsworthy story concerns a venerable gentleman with a colorful but indiscreet past. In the final three days of the life of this remarkable old rake the threads of the double life he led as a younger man became entangled. The climax is one of the really memorable things of screen history.

Through the intensely dramatic scenes runs the tender love story of the old man and the granddaughter for whose sake he dares to make himself liable to the calamity that eventually overcomes him.

George Arliss is the only actor who could so faithfully transfer the Galsworthy hero to the screen.

For those who enjoy red-blooded dramas of action and tense situations the Capitol is Tuesday for the last time offering one of the stage classics of this order in Rex Beach's "The Spoilers," done this time in sound. The talkie version is even greater entertainment that the original production of the silent screen which, while made back in 1913, was always recognized as one of the classics of the soundless films.

The big fight scene is as impressive as ever, with Gary Cooper and William Boyd, he of stageland's "Quirt" renown, tearing, lunging and clawing at each other; as the critical shadows of Farnum, Santschi and Sills stand apace. Other emotion-punishing moods, too, has the narrative and romance, feminine charm, comedy and willful rowdying.

Kay Johnson and Betty Compson, each fighting for the same man, each with the slinking and alert fascination of a panther, silken claws loosed from the velvet veneer of convention, ready for the vital "strike" which spells exultation or hunger to the passion-starved lady heart, "click."

CIVIC LEADERS TO ORGANIZE RELIEF WORK

Formal organization of the Community Service, recently inaugurated by a group of business and civic leaders, will be effected Wednesday night, October 29, at a meeting which will be held at the chamber of commerce. The 17 men who signed the first appeal for organized help to take care of needy families and individuals during the winter, together with representatives of business and professional firms are expected to take part in the organization meeting. Anybody interested, of course, will be welcome to attend the session, it was stated.

Response to the first circular letter sent to 500 individuals and business firms has begun to come in, R. A. Harris, one of those backing the project, stated Tuesday. Requests for 931 pledge cards have been received to date and considerable money has already been made available.

The fact that 100 cents on every dollar collected will be devoted for relief work, none of it going for overhead, should appeal to everybody interested in the project, backers of the idea point out.

"Those who suffer in silence and often refuse assistance are the ones whose mute appeal brings action and also anxiety lest others may be similarly suffering," said a Community Service worker Tuesday. "That fact gave rise to one of the seven distinct objectives of the new service plan. Objective numbe four provides for division of the city into districts each of which will be manned by an agent who will contrive without affront or ostentation to keep advised as to the probability of need within such district in order that necessary relief may not be delayed. We want volunteers for this service."

It was explained that the districts would be small enough to make certain that each such agent could cover the work with a minimum of time and effort. Each on being assigned to his or her district and note the possible two or three families most likely to suffer. Such agents can work as neighbors without divulging their connection with the service, and, with a little diplomacy, can become acquanted with their less fortunate friends.

ULTIMATUM TO SCHOOL FRATS

Officers in the junior and sophomore classes at the senior high school who are known members of secret society organizations have been given until the end of this week by Principal Fred Wolf to make decisions to either hold their offices and abjure their membership in the forbidden clubs, or to lose their offices.

Wolf Tuesday gave a clean bill of health to officers in the senior class, saying that those who had formerly belonged to the secret societies were now "all right." The same applied also to Frank Cross, president of the junior class and known throughout his sophomore year as one of the leading spirits in a forbidden fraternity.

What will follow refusals to give up secret society membership Wolf did not say, other than that class officers would have to leave their posts. It is anticipated that any further steps will be put up squarely to the city school board who at their last meeting questioned the handling of the situation.

The secret society is settling down quietly, for the most active members in the banned clubs graduated with the class last year, and the members of the sophomore class now in high school are not interested in the orders except as friendships were formed before the students entered the senior school. It is known that two girls' organizations have appeared before Wolf and stated emphatically that their groups had swung away from the hush-hush status and were now merely social clubs, with all meetings slated for the evening hours or for non-school days. The girls' organizations have never interfered with school life and student body politics to the extent that the boys' group have, according to Wolf.

Nearly 1,353,000 acres in the Netherlands East Indies were planted to estate rubber this year.

SMITH SPEAKS ON POWER BILL

Menaces of the so-called grange power constitutional amendment before the voters November 4 were presented the Kiwanis club Tuesday noon by A. A. Smith, attorney of Baker, who analyzed the bill and pointed out the numerous defects, dwelling chiefly upon the total absence of protective provisions to the residents of districts that might be formed.

Adoption of such a measure, that cannot be changed by legislative enactments, was held to be a surrender of rights and outside the rights of the legislature to limit the activities of any district that might be created under its provisions. Such a law creating such districts is not to be found in any state, he asserted.

Alarming provisions pointed out by Smith included the selection of a board of five directors with no residence restrictions; power to levy taxes upon all assessable property and power to sell bonds and assume evidence of indebtedness. The amendment, he said, has nothing to do with filing on water power sites; license fees, capitalization for the public service commission, though these angles are mentioned in connection with its adoption by those supporting the amendment.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT!

FIVE million modern mothers will tell you that children DO cry for Fletcher's Castoria. For mothers always give a few drops of this pure vegetable preparation when a child has any of the symptoms that tell of sluggish bowels, colic, or other upsets. When tiny tongues are coated and breath is bad. When a child is restless; irritable. Always soothing and comforting to an infant—yet it is effective for children in their teens. You never have to coax children to take Castoria; they love its taste.

Be ready for the next case of sour stomach, constipation, or other need for Castoria!

Electrically cooked foods... SHRINK LESS!

Compare a ham or fowl that has been cooked electrically with one cooked just the ordinary way... you'll find about 20% less shrinkage! You'll also find a finer flavor... a jucier, more tender result! Do you know why? Because electricity does not consume the oxygen from the air... forcing the natural juices of the roast or fowl to supply the lack of moisture. The health-giving juices and vitamines are sealed in and thoroughly cooked.

You'll find electric cookery more economical for several reasons. Less expensive cuts of meat will have a finer flavor than finer cuts cooked the ordinary way. Practise real economy... use an electric range!

Electrify your kitchen!

A modern Electric Range... Water Heater ... Refrigerator will be installed for only $25 Down... Balance on easy terms... If you buy now!
