SEATTLE EGGS UNDERSELL ALL OTHERS, REPORT

Portland (UP)—The lowest price in the United States of all the leading cities is now being quoted for eggs by Seattle interests, according to word from there. A market set at 18c for U. S. extras, which are a more closely candled grade than the local extras, established a new low record for the wintry period along the Pacific slope.

It has been the demoralized trend of the Puget Sound interests that has played more or less havoc with the Portland price situation for some time. The under-selling of established prices has long been a bearish argument against the Portland market values.

Efforts are being made by killers to stock up with live chickens, but at a lower price range. Offers are as low as 11c for light hens. There has been a fair increase in the recent supply as a result of extreme low egg prices.

Up to 23c pound is being offered by a local killer for No. 1 dressed tom turkeys, Portland delivery, although general bids are around 30-31c. Some are paying the same price for hens as well as for toms.

Very liberal demand is continued for country killed lambs at full recent prices. Hogs and veal are steady to weaker. Beef is about steady with bulls scarce.

With a further increase in the supply, sales of Columbia river smelt are being made down to 4c lb., by local wholesalers. There is an acute shortage of crabs as well as crab meat. Frozen halibut is slow sale with inferior quality.

Indicating spring, or at least an approach to it, is the initial offering of onion sets on the market. The first supply is selling 7-8c lb.

Very sluggish trading tone is reflected in the potato trade, both at the source and at jobbing points. The increased supply forecast by the late government report is a factor.

Montana endive is finding much favor in the local trade. Shipments were sold quickly at 60c pound.

Hothouse tomatoes are in most nominal supply. Hothouse mushrooms are moving well up to 65c lb.

There is a very firm price on artichokes. Cranberries are moving very slowly at $19-$20 barrel.

All citrus fruit prices are unchanged; higher priced small stuff to arrive last of week.

Hothouse rhubarb is steady with increased supplies.

Sweet potatoes are just steady, stock not keeping well.

California cauliflower is lower, with indifferent quality. Locals much the best and highest.

Bread dates are finding a fair sale around 18-20c pound.

U. S. RUBBER BUYS TWO COMPETITORS

Detroit, Mich. (UP)—The United States Rubber company has acquired a controlling interest in two other rubber companies, it was announced here Wednesday by J. F. O'Shaughnessy, general manager of the tire department.

The plans involved in the transaction are the Gillette Rubber company of Eau Claire, Wis., and the Samson Tire & Rubber Co., of Los Angeles.

PRESSURE EXERTED TO SPEED UP SENATE

Controversy broke out in the house judiciary committee over proposals to prevent the counting of aliens in reappointment of the house.

Representative Sparks, republican, Kansas, sought vainly to prevent a hearing for Representative Tinkham, republican, Mass., who has an amendment designed to counteract such moves by forcing southern states to exclude negroes in the reapportionment count. Tinkham will be heard next Wednesday.

The Jones bill authorizing $1,000,000 a year for federal infancy and maternity aid was described as "a menace to the constitution, worse than communism" by Willard Woodward of the legislative committee of the American Medical association, who appeared before the house interstate commerce committee.

Outspoken opposition to exemption of the proposed to $8,000,000,000 federal bond issue from surtaxes, is provided in the bill recommended by Secretary of Treasury Mellon and approved by the house ways and means committee, was expressed by Representative Hull, democrat, Tennessee, a member of the committee.

PORTLAND STOCK EXCHANGE TO CLOSE

WHEAT PRICES DULL BUT FIRM IN CHICAGO PIT

Chicago (AP)—Wheat was dull but firm on the board of trade Wednesday in sympathy with foreign markets, July closing fractionally higher with the old crop months around steady. Trade was very light and prices moved in a restricted range. Winnipeg reported a good export demand. Corn was unsettled but rather steady with wheat. The trade paid little attention to the Wickersham report. Oats had a firm undertone and were somewhat higher.

At the close wheat was unchanged to ¼ cent higher with July ⅛ cent up, corn was ¼ to ¼ cent higher and oats were unchanged to ¼ cent higher. Provisions were steady to higher, lard advancing.

Chicago (AP)—Unfavorable weather reports from Argentina, India and domestic winter crop territory led to early upturns Wednesday in grains. Virtually complete absence of snow covering over the United States winter wheat belt was officially noted, with some damage from freezing and thawing in the Ohio valley. Starting unchanged to 5-8 cent higher, wheat afterward held near the initial figures. Corn opened unchanged to ¼ cent up, and continued firm.

DRY REPORT TO HELP HOPS

"As a whole the Wickersham report looks pretty favorable to the hop industry and I believe will have a tendency to stiffen the market somewhat," was the comment of ex-Mayor T. A. Livesley and prominent local hop man who, with other hop men, has been awaiting anxiously the report to see its tenor as to its effect on general conditions in the industry.

"An analysis of the report, I believe will indicate that the committee as a whole believes that conditions would be materially improved by modification. Even those, as I understand it, who are opposed to immediate modification, believe that after a certain period if conditions do not improve with further trial that modification will be the only method of bringing about an improvement. That is tantamount to an admission that conditions now are bad enough to warrant modification, providing the members did not feel there was a possibility of improvement in a reasonable length of time. Those who have watched the situation are extremely doubtful of improvement but rather incline to the feeling that as time goes on conditions will get worse instead of improve unless a radical change is made."

BOWLES DEFENSE ASKS EXAMINATION

stabbed and beaten by an unidentified man. It was the second attack on the woman. Last month, she said, she was beaten by two men who threatened her life if she testified in the case.

The defense based its move on the contention reports of the injuries suffered by Mrs. Howard in the two attacks "have been highly exaggerated" and that no "independent" physicians have been allowed to examine her.

Hospital reports indicated the presence of a narcotic in the woman's blood. She was quoted as having said her attacker plunged a hypodermic needle in her arm.

Collier's petition said: "We cannot accept the unique theory that some person armed himself with a bludgeon, a dirk and a hypodermic needle and attacked her in her home, first striking her on the head with a club, then stabbing her in the breast, and then injecting vast quantities of narcotics in her arm."

Sheriffs, Police Chiefs And Prosecutors Believe Dry Law Unenforceable

Seattle (UP)—Sheriffs, police chiefs and prosecuting attorneys in four states of the Pacific northwest believe the dry law is unenforceable, and that the public sentiment is strongly against prohibition. This was revealed here Wednesday when the Northwest Police Journal released results of a poll conducted in towns and cities of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. The vote resulted in an opposite viewpoint from the Wickersham commission's report which criticized county and city officers for the failure of the dry law to function in many localities.

Approximately 9 out of every 10 sheriffs, police chiefs and prosecutors in the four states expressed resentment at the commission's criticism, declared that the law cannot be enforced, and said that public sentiment in the northwest is against prohibition.

Questionaires were mailed to every prosecutor, police chief and sheriff in the four states. Approximately 80 per cent have replied and returns continued to be received. Less than 10 per cent of the officials said they believed the dry law could be enforced in their communities, and the majority expressed themselves in favor of repeal of the 18th amendment, declaring that there was no ground for modification and that government control similar to that employed in British Columbia would be the best solution.

A surprising result of the poll was the statement from officials in rural districts, where prohibition is supposed to be strongest, that the communities are "dripping wet" and that public sentiment demands a "hands-off" attitude from officers where liquor is concerned.

Sixty-five per cent of the officials declared that prohibition had done more to increase crime and juvenile delinquency than any other factor.

Montana, the only "wet" state in the group, proved to be no wetter than Idaho and Washington, according to the comparative opinions of the officials upon whom the burden of prohibition enforcement rests.

O. A. C. COEDS' TRIP TO ALASKA BLOCKED

Seattle (UP)—Their contemplated voyage to Alaska, planned because things weren't going so well at Oregon State college, ended Wednesday for two pretty O. S. C. co-eds, Margaret Reed, 18, and Shirley Cassell, 18, who were released from jail after they had promised to go back to Oregon.

The girls, who were apprehended by police at the request of their parents, said they were dissatisfied with courses they were forced to take at Oregon State, so had planned to go to Alaska, establish residence there, and return to Seattle to enter the University of Washington, which they understood offered free tuition to people from Alaska.

They neglected, however, to tell their parents. But they took three boy friends into their confidence, and the boys told on them. Their parents requested an uncle to meet them in Seattle, but he failed, so the police acted.

Miss Reed said her grandmother lived in Alaska, and the girls planned to go see her.

Margaret and Shirley promised they would return to Oregon and talk over the Alaska proposition with their parents.

INDICTMENT OF BOWLES STANDS

Portland (UP)—Another barrier to the trial of Nelson C. Bowles and Irma G. Loucks has been removed by the denial by Circuit Judge Elkwall of defense motions to quash the indictment charging them with the first degree murder of Mrs. Leone C. Bowles.

The defense, through John A. Collier of the legal staff, announced definitely that no demurrer to the indictment will be filed and that his clients very likely will enter pleas of not guilty when they appear in court Friday at 2 p.m.

Judge Elkwall's sustaining of the murder indictment came Tuesday afternoon following arguments on the motion that lasted nearly three days.

The court ruled on all five causes offered by the defense why the indictment should be set aside. Judge Elkwall said on the first ground, that he believed it quite conclusive that Vincent Thoma did not appear before the grand jury before January 2, as charged by the defense; that the second and third grounds could be disposed of since the state was willing to delete the notation "at their own request" on the indictment in connection with the appearance of Dr. Paul B. Cooper, W. H. Cullers and R. D. Shelley before the grand jury, and that there was no evidence sustaining the fourth point that persons other than those legally entitled to be there were before the jury.

On the fifth point, the court said if any unsworn statements were read before the grand jury that the law indicated "it would not be proper to indorse on the indictment, the names of persons responsible for the statements, as those persons were not witnesses."

Attorneys for Bowles and the girl announced Wednesday no demurrer will be filed to the murder indictment. A delay of three weeks was gained by filing of motions to quash the indictments, overruled late Tuesday by Circuit Judge Elkwall.

Bowles and Miss Loucks will enter pleas at 2 p. m. Friday. John Collier of the defense said Wednesday he expects them to plead not guilty.

The time for filing for a change of venue would logically follow the entering of pleas, but the defense has not discussed this point.

RAIL LIST FIRM INDUSTRIALS ON DECLINING SIDE

New York (AP)—Persistent strength in Auburn Automobile, and signs of firmness in the railroad shares failed to prevent irregular tendencies on the stock exchange Wednesday.

According to preliminary calculations, the Dow-Jones & Co., industrial average declined 1.23 points, and the railroad average advanced 1.21 points to 103.94.

Sales for the session totaled 1,497,535 shares as compared with 1,329,260 shares Tuesday.

Prices in the main body of stocks fluctuated narrowly. A firm opening was followed by a renewal of selling in leading shares, which continued until near the close. Just before the final gong, a better tone developed and part of the early losses were recovered.

Selling operations were prevented from gaining headway by heavy buying of Auburn, which ran up a half dozen points at the expense of an overcrowded short interest. Gains of a fraction to more than two points were made by the principal rails.

Aside from the uprush in Auburn, there was little feature to the trading.

MEIER MEASURES FAIL TO APPEAR

er bracketing and other designating marks the new matter contained therein, or the subject matter to be deleted from the existing statute. It was immediately ruled back to the governor's office to be redrawn in an endeavor to have it ready for the legislative committee's scrutiny and introduction at the afternoon session.

When the governor's bills for creating a power commission and otherwise enacting his power policies will be ready to drop in the hopper Representative Lawrence was unable to say.

There was every expectation all through Tuesday and well into the evening that the grange power district bill, upon which a dozen or more attorneys and legislators have been concentrating their attention for the past month, would be ready Wednesday morning.

Its failure to put in an appearance led to the discovery that it is still not in shape satisfactory to all of the factions interested in and seeking to sponsor it, and a crew of constitutional lawyers, supplemented by one or two members was busy redrafting the measure for the fifteenth time Wednesday. They professed a hope that they might have it in acceptible shape by Thursday morning.

The latest defects in the bill were uncovered at a conference in the executive offices Tuesday evening attended by the governor, members of the grange legislative committee, "consulting" attorneys and members of the house and senate who have ambitions to be godfathers to the measure.

Meagre reports of the session drifting out from the sanctum indicate it was a stormy session in which the legal experts clashed, and jealousies noised their way up through the tranquil surface of harmony thinly veiled.

Senator Joe Bailey's critical analysis of the technical form and legal content, and his flat declaration that it was clearly unconstitutional in some respects is allegedly responsible for the decision to redraft it.

Bailey is understood to have issued the ultimatum that while he is wholly in sympathy with the general terms and aims of the bill he does not intend to stand idly by and see it mutilated and thrown into extended controversy in the courts and finally cast aside by its own irregularities.

Too many "constitutional lawyers" seems to be chiefly responsible for the stormy seas the grange bill is encountering.

Incidentally, this same bill is also causing no little rift in the harmony which hovered over the public ownership camp during the opening days of the session. The group now shows indications of being much divided, with some of the champions of the cause exhibiting symptoms of peeve toward and suspicion of their cohorts.

Who actually is to father the grange bill when it drops is still largely a matter of speculation. Rivalry for the honor is keen. It is reflecting itself in the endeavors of certain senate and house members to gain public recognition as spokesman for the administration in their respective houses.

Senator Sam Brown, who expressed to function for Governor Meier, as the administrative mouthpiece in the senate, has been somewhat overshadowed by the enterprize along that direction of Senator Burke, and Brown's reported offer at Tuesday night's conference to sponsor the grange bill is said to have fanned that flame just a little brighter.

Over in the house Representative Gill is said to be wondering how Lawrence grabbed off the honor of being the governor's agent.

Chief interest about the legislative halls Wednesday centered in the public hearing scheduled for evening on the bill to close the Rogue river to commercial fishing. Since the opening day the lobby has been swarming with lobbyists for the sportsmen's organizations all over the state, and as the time for the hearing by the joint game committee draws near the faces of recognized lobbyists for the commercial fishing interests are in evidence.

It is entirely possible that the committee may have to commander the house chamber to accomodate the crowd attending the hearing, which opens at 8 o'clock.

The senate killed by indefinite postponement, Senator Woodward's bill which would repeal the requirement that one of the four district judges in Multnomah county sit as a committing magistrate. This was done by unanimous adoption of an adverse report of the judiciary committee.

The committee reported favorably on Woodward's bill, which would extend the jurisdiction of the district courts to cases involving as high as $1000 in claims. The present limit is $500.

Defending his bill to remove the committing magistrate requirement, Woodward said that two judges would be enough where four sit at the present time, and that "it is the custom of the court to elect one of its number as a poo-bah. If he happens to be on the links the wheels of justice are on flat tires until he returns."

Senators Moser and Crawford said that Woodward was in error, and that if the committing magistrate happened to be away, one of the other three takes care of criminal cases. Senator Bailey also opposed the bill, and Senator Bennett defended it.

Two of Senator Strayer's bills were passed by the senate. One was an amendment providing that if the value of the property of an estate, exclusive of liens and encumbrances, is less than $350 the court may order sale of the property without requiring the estate to go to the
