HILL LINES DENIED SILETZ RAILROAD

The controversy, together with recommendations, will be submitted to the commission for final adjudication.

The Oregon Electric purchase and construction program which Sullivan's report tentatively rejected, is only one of a series of contested extension projects in which the northern roads, the Great Northern being particularly aggressive, have sought to enter Southern Pacific territory.

The most important of these resulted last summer in the commission granting permission to the Great Northern to extend its line southward from Klamath Falls and, in conjunction with the Western Pacific, run its rails direct to San Francisco harbor. In this case the commission disregarded the staunch resistence of the Southern Pacific, but in the proceedings brought up Wednesday, which are inconclusive, the commission is tentatively supporting the Southern Pacific in claiming the right to serve Oregon territory against the projected invasion of the northern lines. Commissioner (then examiner) Charles D. Mahaffie, handled the Klamath Falls extension cases in extended hearings in San Francisco.

Although the valley road is only 40 miles long and all located in Polk and Benton counties, Oregon, the projected extension by the electric company from Orrville to Independence to reach it would entail construction of an expensive bridge, Sullivan held. He said service to shippers could be rendered with existing facilities without new investment if the Southern Pacific should acquire the valley line.

The report observed that "public convenience and necessity would be best served by ownership of the Valley and Siletz road by a trunk line, but consummation of the plan presented by the Oregon Electric is not the solution of the problem. It added that "the proposed price of $2,000,000 for the valley line is not justified by facts of record," and in consequence the entire project of the Northern Pacific should be set aside.

The Southern Pacific, on the other hand, was declared to be entitled to open negotiations for the purchase of the valley road and to obtain the commission's approval for its operation as part of its own general system, "on a fair and reasonable basis."

SAY HOOVER FORCED DRY REPORT CHANGE

with the recommendations "except that in which a revision of the 18th amendment is suggested immediately."

No such suggestion was contained in the final general report, either for action immediately or at any other time. The commission merely suggested what the change to be, if anything is done.

President Hoover described this point in the commission's report as a "proposed revision of the eighteenth amendment which is suggested by them for possible consideration at some future time if the continued effort at enforcement should not prove successful."

It was recalled Wednesday that several weeks ago republican leaders in the senate said they were advised the Wickersham report would be made on January 6. The commission held several sessions around that time but there was a mystifying delay and issuance of the report was postponed for more than two weeks.

This delay never has been explained officially. The report itself and the eleven individual reports appended all are dated January 7.

CONFERENCE HELD

While neither Chairman Wickersham nor the White House would add anything to the official document, a high authority close to the president told the United Press the commission's views upon the revision of the 18th amendment were changed after conferences between President Hoover and Chairman Wickersham.

Also it was learned that the message which President Hoover sent to congress in submitting the report was a second version quickly drafted Tuesday morning, after he had discussed the report, and the first draft of the message with the cabinet. The first message was destroyed after the cabinet meeting and a new one drafted which stenographers prepared for transmittal to congress in great haste.

However, Chairman Wickersham himself in his separate report referred to the revised proposals as "the one recommended in our report." Commissioner William S. Kenyon refers to "modification of the eighteenth amendment suggested by the commission." Henry W. Anderson says: "I concur in the recommendation of the report that the eighteenth amendment be modified as therein stated."

MAKES IT ISSUE

Ammunition has been provided in the commission's report to force the prohibition issue deeper into national politics, with the possibility of its becoming the dominant issue in next year's presidential campaign, according to the prevalent view here.

President Hoover took his stand behind the eighteenth amendment and against the revision in his message to congress transmitting the report. This declaration was regarded here as committing the republican party, so long as it accepts Mr. Hoover's leadership, to the dry cause. It forcasts his campaign for reflection on the dry side. If the democrats, as desired by their national chairman, John J. Raskob, nominate an anti-prohibitionist, the issue would be forced.

While friends of prohibition found their cause strengthened by the president's prompt defense of the 18th amendment, the leverage of anti-prohibitionists was increased in two days by the contents of the Wickersham report. First, by conditions under prohibition as disclosed in the report and denounced by the dryest members of the commission. Second, by the fact seven of the 11 commissioners declared individually for a constitutional change which would permit restoration of liquor traffic in localities which desired it.

KENYON'S REMARKS

Judge Kenyon, one of the dryest members of the commission, urged a congressional investigation to air the whole story. He declared some of the evidence of prohibition corruption "so startling that it is difficult to believe," he added:

"Of course, there was corruption prior to prohibition. The saloon was the center of political activity, but I think the corruption was not so widespread and flagrant as it now is. The amounts involved were not so large. Corruption had not become such an established art and racketeering was unknown."

ROOT PLEADS FOR COURT ADHERENCE

opinion on any question in which the United States had, or claimed to have, an interest without first obtaining the consent of this government.

"First," he said, "in the asking of advisory opinions of the court, the assembly and the council of the league of nations would be obliged to proceed in ignorance of the attitude of the United States. It would throw doubt and delay around all proceedings.

"Second, there was ignorance on the part of the other powers of the council as to the meaning of the term intended in the reservation. There was ignorance as to the scope the United States would give to the term 'interest.' It might mean legal interest, it might mean political interest and so forth."

Mr. Root, a former secretary of state, recited instances of the application of such provisions in other treaties. He recalled the treaty of 1832 with Russia which he said was terminated.

"No difficulties arise any more over termination," he said. "So the senate's reservation and its acceptance very much relieved the difficulty in making the agreement."

Root then took up the negotiations for meeting the senate's objectionable reservation regarding advisory opinions. He met two years ago with other international jurists to solve the problem.

Reading the solution then worked out, as provided in the protocol now before the senate, Root said "it does not in the slightest degree modify the senate's reservation."

He said the United States was protected at all times by another senate reservation already accepted by the other powers "which makes the agreement terminable at will."

LEAGUE OF CITIES FATHERS 12 BILLS

Twelve bills, introduced in the 36th legislative assembly at the request of League of Oregon Cities, were received by the house Wednesday morning, all bearing the signatures of Chinnock, J. H. E. Scott and McAllister. The group includes provision for a statewide building code, consolidating the present plumbing and electrical codes and adds a structural code to make the entire code complete. Buildings affected are principally city and public buildings outside the city. For the purpose of economy, city inspectors may be utilized by the labor commission at the request of the city officials.

The legislation is proposed by the State League of Municipalities, with a membership of 50 cities, the Oregon Building Congress, State Master Plumbers' association, Journeymen Plumbers' organizations, State Electrical Contractors' association, Journeymen Electricians and the Associated General Contractors.

BEAR MOVED TO NEW RANCH HOME

The bear of Karl Peters, caught by him and Jack Callaghan on a hunting trip in the Blue Mountains, and which has been hibernating in a pen at the Belcrest Memorial park, was moved this week by Game Warden Ben Claggett to the Hawkins & Roberts place operated by Fred Auer in Polk county. The bear is due to have his future home there and be brought up as a farmer bear, Peters stated. He said the supply of carrots having run low he turned him over to Hawkins & Roberts for his feed.

The bear is being kept in a pen on the Polk county ranch, which is about a mile north of Rickreall.

CHURCHES OBSERVE PROHIBITION SUNDAY

A city-wide observance of Prohibition Sunday on February 1 has been arranged by the Salem Ministerial association. Many churches in the city and cancelling their evening services that Sunday to unite in a mass-meeting for all interested citizens to be held in the armory at 7:30 o'clock February 1.

Dr. B. Earle Parker, pastor of the First Methodist church, is chairman of the program committee for the mass meeting. Assisting on the committee are Dr. Grover C. Birtchet of the First Presbyterian church; Captain E. M. Williams of the Salvation Army; Mrs. Elizabeth Gallaher, executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A.; and Rev. W. Earl Cochran of the Calvary Baptist church, who will have charge of the music and community singing. Arrangements are being made to secure the Portland Salvation Army band for a concert as a prelude to the rally. O. P. Coshow, former Oregon chief justice of the supreme court, will be one of the speakers.

In addition to the mass meeting, all pastors of the city are making plans to speak at the morning services on some phase of prohibition and its present status.

SALVAGE 40,000 BRICK FOR DERBY

According to report 40,000 brick have been salvaged for the caved in walls of the Derby building being rebuilt for the Charles R. Archerd Implement company at Front and State streets. The result is that only about 8000 brick need to be purchased new and have been secured from the Salem Brick & Tile company.

The salvaged brick were cleaned by a crew of men at the rate of $2 a thousand or the expense of the brick for the main portion of the walls running to $80 for the salvaging. New brick cost $15 per thousand in a lot as large as that purchased and the cost for the equivalent of the 40,000 bricks saved would have been around $600.

A good share of the walls were left standing after the fire which destroyed the interior of the building but a high wind a few nights afterward blew them down and necessitated an entire rebuilding.

MARKET ROAD TAX DISCUSSED BY JUDGES

Members of the legislative committee of the state county judges and commissioners association who were here Tuesday to discuss the possible effects of a repeal of the 1 mill market road laws went away feeling that the legislation which will probably be suggested will not be so drastic as to seriously harm the counties. While they did not get actual access to the administration measure as it will go into the legislative hopper they did get a line on its probable contents from men familiar with the administration plans and if the bill is as outlined they believe the counties will still be able to go on with their market road programs.

Contents of the proposed measure were not revealed by members of the committee but it is thought it may be worked out satisfactorily. However, it is not likely that the county judges will approve any onslaught into state highway funds
