ILSE FILES APPEAL

Ilse claimed that at his trial he was not permitted to take the bomb battery part to determine if it was dead, and that he was prevented from showing he had been "persecuted by a powerful Spokane political ring."

Ilse's bomb was contained in a trunk.

Wolf Denies Story Of Student Dope Ring But Inquiry Underway

There is no positive evidence that any student in Salem high school is a member of a suspected dope-eating gang of boys of high school age which is now being traced by police authorities, according to Principal Fred Wolf of Salem high school.

Wolf received the names of several suspects from police authorities who conferred with him about the "dope ring" a week ago, and since then he has had teachers and the physical education instructor checking on the boys. He stated that the suspected students were normal in classroom work and showed no evidence at any time of being under the influence of narcotics or other drugs.

Whether the suspected boys were members of the high school basketball squad, as has been rumored, Wolf did not state.

Mr. Wolf, however, was much exercised over the idea of connecting high school students with the supposed ring of dope-eaters. He stated that the majority of the boys in the ring, he understood, were boys who were not students at any school, just loiterers about the streets, or "town bums," as he classified them.

"The public is quick to blame the high school kids when a bunch of boys of the same age, town bums, get into trouble," Principal Wolf said. "Probably some of the high school kids are mixed up in the mess, we're not denying it, but I've never noticed any evidence among the students in the classroom or about the building or any other place in their work. We're doing all we can to help the high school authorities run down the peddler or peddlers who give such stuff to the kids. Of course, the boys who take the dope are responsible, but we all realize how easy it is for boys to get mixed up in a mess like that. According to my personal feelings, hanging is too good for a bird like that, who will give dope to young boys and girls and try to wreck their lives."

"We're doing all we can to assist the authorities," continued Wolf. "But I would like to have a bit more cooperation from them myself. I understood they got hold of a gang of high school boys for money, and I'd like to know more about it. We can't have kids like that running loose around the school. There's a lot of thievery that goes on around here, too, right here in the building. Lots of books are stolen. There's no need for stealing books, for we will make things easy for any one that comes in and says he hasn't money enough to get books, or to dress decently for school. We'll see he's taken care of. But 90 per cent of the kids that take another student's books are kids whose parents are amply able to buy books for them. Of course, some kids are just careless with their books on top of their lockers, or don't lock their lockers; and I always think they are partly to blame with their own carelessness and tell them so."

"But, just the same, the majority of kids in the school are decent, and we're proud of them," added Wolf.

City and county authorities were not so well-pleased with what Wolf said about dope-peddling among high school students. It is understood that the story which Wolf gave to a newspaper reporter Tuesday night placed police authorities in an embarrassing position as they had not completed their investigations of the dope-ring situation.

After two and a half years of court battles James McGilchrist of Salem has won his suit against the F. W. Woolworth company, according to word brought to Salem from Portland Wednesday by McGilchrist. The trial which had extended over a period of three days in Judge Tazewell's court in Portland ended Wednesday morning when a jury brought in a verdict in favor of McGilchrist for all that he had asked for—a sum slightly in excess of $3900. The amount asked for by McGilchrist in his suit was the difference between what the company had paid him while he was in the employ of the Woolworth company and what he would have received if they had paid him $50 a week as manager.

McGilchrist went to work for the company in a subordinate capacity with the understanding that he was to be given a store. He was denied this position, however, when the concern made a ruling that no man over 40 years of age would be placed in the management of a store. It is likely the case will be appealed to the supreme court by the store company.

Relatives of Teddy E. Byrd, 32, who committed suicide last Friday, arrived in Salem Tuesday night and Wednesday morning to complete funeral arrangements. The remains had been held here during attempts to locate relatives after the man died late last Friday night, about 13 hours after he shot himself in the head at a local hotel. Byrd had been living in Salem for the past year and working as district manager for the Eureka vacuum cleaner company.

With the arrival of his widow, Mrs. T. E. Byrd, from her home in Portland, N. D., Wednesday morning, funeral services were arranged for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at the Clough-Barrick chapel, with interment to be made in the Odd Fellows cemetery.

In addition to his widow, Byrd is survived by a four-year-old daughter, Florence Jean, and one brother, Robert, in Waco, Texas. Mrs. Byrd, sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Fagan of Napa, Calif., drove up from the California city, arriving here Tuesday night, to be with Mrs. Byrd. The Byrds were not separated or divorced, as erroneously understood when stories were first published of his death.

Coldwater, Mich. (UP)—W. Perkins Bull, K. C. close friend of the King of England, who was injured in a motorist's crash, was better in no danger of death unless unforeseen complications arise, his physician, Dr. W. C. Wootton, said Wednesday.

Dr. Wootton said it had not been decided whether to move Bull to Windsor, Ont., and would give no reason why such a move was desirable. The physician admitted, however, that Bull could be moved without serious danger.

Bull, together with Bernard Marder, vice president of the Henrick Malted Milk Co., was injured in Detroit on a mysterious errand when their car crashed into a heavy trailer drawn by a truck.

Twenty-nine cities of the United States now are equipped with police radio systems.

REFUND BILL IS SENT BACK

House bill 298, providing for an immediate refund of $894,458.33, collected by the state tax commission under the intangibles tax act that was later declared unconstitutional, did not come up as a special order in the house Wednesday as scheduled. Instead the sponsors of the bill have agreed, according to Representative Allan Bynon, one of the introducers of the bill, to send it back to the committee for amendment to harmonize with the program of the three taxation and revenue committees of the house, and senate.

This bill is to be sent to the committee on constitutional law. The amendment will provide that the money be refunded if and when the United States supreme court refuses to take jurisdiction of the intangibles tax case or sustains the opinion of the state supreme court which held the old act unconstitutional. It will be further provided that if the refund is made it will be accompanied by interest at the legal rate from the time the state supreme court refused a rehearing of the case to the time the refund is made.

This agreement doubtless will make it much easier stalling for the revised tax program that has been formulated by the tax committees, since the determined conclusion for an immediate refund has been one of the obstacles in the way of tax legislation.

The board of directors of the Salem Kiwanis club Wednesday authorized the program of the club's agricultural committee to award eight scholarships to 4-H club members this year, eight to county winners and three to state winners. The agricultural committee which outlined the program includes Frank Doerfler, Sam Koser and W. W. Fox. The scholarships all are for attendance at the state college summer school. In addition to the scholarships the winners will all be guests of the Kiwanis club at a luncheon and high jinks for their benefit.

The county scholarships will be given for the following competitions: sewing, cooking and wood-working, on the best point; Strophshire, for champion ewe lamb, and Jersey for champion calf.

The three state awards of scholarships will be on the best gilt for Poland Chinas, Chester Whites and Duroc Jerseys.

The first three county awards will be made at the county fair of 4-H clubs held here in April and the balance will be awarded to Marion county winners at the state fair.

The Kiwanis club is the only service club in the county which is sponsoring the 4-H clubs.

Legge seeks grain embargo acting the legislation. Legge said the flexible provisions of the tariff are inoperative on agricultural products because farmers do not keep cost accounts and the tariff commission is required to base its recommendations on prices over "a representative period of time."

He said the commission interprets this language to mean two years. "My approach to the tariff is not that of a high tariff advocate," Legge said, "but I feel in this emergency our first duty is to the people here at home. The world is in the greatest distress of our life time."

Legge said an embargo would not have a good effect on our foreign relations but that other countries have had embargos from time to time. He said France has a practical embargo on wheat at the present time.

"There are several things in this tariff on agriculture I cannot understand at all," he continued. "For example, we could use cereal grains in the production of industrial alcohol, yet we import practically all of this product. The tariff on wheat is 42 cents a bushel but you can crack wheat and bring in mill feed at 10 per cent ad valorem."

Legge said the farm board is holding through its stabilization corporation about 100,000,000 bushels of cash wheat and a large amount of contracts in addition. He set the visible supply in the United States at about twice the farm board holdings.

He termed wheat prospects west of the Mississippi good but less favorable in the east. "Unless you give us something different in the way of weather we will sell our wheat at a loss," Legge said in reply to questions.

He predicted the wheat inventory on July 1 will be less than it was last year when there was a 275,000,000 bushel carry-over.

MASTERPIECE OF REMBRANDT SLASHED

Amsterdam (UP)—Rembrandt's famous painting "the anatomical lesson" was damaged by a vandal who slashed it with an axe in five places, police revealed Wednesday with the announcement that they had made an arrest.

State Property Tax Removal Dreaded Lest Chaos Follow

Fickleness of the voting public in rejecting any well-worked out and systematic plan of relieving the tax burden now borne by real property, through invocation of the referendum thus giving no assurance that sufficient revenue would be forthcoming, makes members of the house of representatives reluctant in removing all taxes from real property for state purposes. Debate on the Mott resolution, which occupied the house during all of the Wednesday morning session, was interrupted by noon recess.

The resolution, which received an unfavorable report from a majority of the committee, provides that no ad valorem tax for state purposes shall be levied on real property or tangible personal property, with the needed revenue to be raised from sources other than real property effective March 1, 1933.

Experiences of the past, during which various income taxes have been levied, have convinced the committee that such a plan would be unworkable.

SALEM'S CHANCE TO WIN HEALTH CONTEST GOOD

Salem has an excellent opportunity to win the inter-chamber health community contest sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in its contest division, according to Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer, who with Charles Wilson, secretary to the local chamber of commerce, has completed the contest entry blank.

The entrance blank is required to be in the Washington, D. C. office of the national chamber of commerce by March 1.

Dr. Douglas based his predictions on Salem's favorable chance by comparison with the statistics of health work with which White Plains, New York, won the inter-chamber contest last year, in the same class that Salem is now entered in. In many instances, Salem's record of health work exceeds that shown by White Plains, according to Dr. Douglas.

The report is especially interesting since it is the first health report ever to be made of Salem. All other reports compiled by the health department have been made on Marion county as a whole.

Outstanding features of the report, according to the health officer, is Salem's record in the decrease of diphtheria and tuberculosis. There has been but one death from diphtheria inside the city limits during the past five years. During the previous five years, 31 deaths from diphtheria were reported from Salem. Tuberculosis deaths in Salem have been reduced from 17 deaths in 1921 to five deaths in 1930. There were 10 deaths from smallpox in the capital city during the past ten years. Infant deaths decreased from 30 in 1922 to 12 in 1930. At present there are 42 cases of tuberculosis under supervision in Salem, 21 of the cases being reported for the first time during 1930. There were no maternal deaths in Salem during 1930, according to the records.

The contest blanks show that 3,215 gallons of milk were distributed in Salem each day during the past year, and that 85 percent of this milk was pasteurized. All raw milk sold in Salem comes from tuberculin tested cows.

The number of clinical examinations were difficult to secure, as work done by private physicians along this line had to be estimated. Health unit statistics showed that 174 dental babies were examined 313 times during the past year and 190 school children were examined 277 times at the health center. It was estimated that about 350 infants and preschool children, in addition to the numbers listed above, were examined by private physicians.

The per capita cost for health in Salem was a very searching study of results obtained from health work, and that he was confident Salem would make an excellent showing among cities of its own size in health work.

WOMAN WOUNDED WHILE ON STREE

Portland (UP)—Wounded by a bullet fired by an unidentified assailant, Mrs. Arlene Bowles, 19, was in a hospital Wednesday. Her injury was not serious. Police had no report or clue upon which to work. The possibility the girl was struck by a stray bullet was considered.

Mrs. Bowles was struck in the left hip as she was returning to her apartment late Tuesday. Several persons saw her as she fell to the sidewalk, and a number of others reported having heard a shot. The girl neither saw the person who shot, nor heard the report.

Mrs. Bowles four months ago was severely injured and her male companion killed when they were struck by a friend's automobile after a roadhouse party near San Francisco.
