EGGS MOVE TO STORAGE; LIST BUTTER STEADY

Portland (UP) — General storage operations are indicated in the market for eggs with a showing of private speculative interest. Bidding for supplies at country points is now quite fair with most offers around 17 cents for New York extras on a candled basis. This means somewhat less on the basis of so-called local extras.

Butter prices continue to be shaded here with no change in the general list. Sales of 92 score stock down to 29 cents are confirmed in the print market. In fact sales of 92s are being made occasionally in line with 91s.

Strength is retained generally in the market for live poultry here with full prices being offered. There is an especially good call for heavy hens and for broilers.

There was a lack of general price change for country killed meats at the week-end. Top quality calves, vealers and hogs are finding favor at extreme prices while off grade is reported more or less easy.

Strength is generally retained in the market for potatoes at primary points although buyers are using mor eor less caution. Many are still unwilling to believe that the betterment has been forced.

Despite the broadcasting from Portland by a press association of a shortage of broccoli and strong prices; values are generally being shaded here. In fact there has been an easier tone noted for several days at least.

Prices of asparagus shows a very sharp decline here as a result of liberally increased supplies from California and low values there. Sales are shown here around 9-11 cents a pound.

Lettuce market is again generally lower with considerable stuff on the tracks.

Strawberries are of more or less indifferent quality, sales down to 30-35 cents pint.

Mushrooms are again in fair supply; selling around 60 cents a pound.

Mexican tomatoes are showing a sharp cut of 50 cents with repacked lugs down to $4.50 generally.

provisions of retirement of the public debt."

The other course was indicated by the president in his last message to congress. He warned:

"Most rigid economy is necessary to avoid increase in taxes."

In his budget message at the same time, he forecast a deficit of $180,000,000 for this fiscal year, but said:

"The adverse balance can be met by reducing the general fund balance from the amount in it at the beginning of the year, supplemented, if necessary, by temporary borrowing by the treasury."

With cautious appropriations, he estimated that the country would end the next fiscal year with a surplus of $30,600,000. Appropriations made during the session exceeded $5,000,000,000, a little less than various sums approved by the budget bureau. The total appropriated however, did not reflect the actual expenditures for the coming fiscal year because of various funds set aside for use over periods of several years.

WOULD WALLOP LEWIS AGAIN, DREISER SAYS

accused the other of plagiarism. It was supposed, however, that the old enmity had been forgotten.

Dreiser said in the interview that he did not consider the incident to have been a regrettable affair, but neither does he feel proud of it.

He said he has known Lewis since 1905, and that he really believes Lewis can "write well."

"I don't think he really dislikes me," he said. "I know I don't dislike him: I don't think he was in his right mind."

Dreiser said that when Lewis made the remarks about him during his speech, "I didn't pay much attention to him." A man who has been writing novels as long as he has, the author suggested, had to put up with a lot of adverse comment.

"I went out into the hall," he said, "and was ready to go home. I ran into him out there. He started making unseemly remarks and calling me names. He kept squawking about it and I told him to act his age. He continued his wild talk so I let him have one.

"Well, about that time someone came up. I think it was Will Lengel, and told me I was wanted on the telephone. I told Lewis that I was going to answer the call, but that if he had anything more to say to me, I would be back in a moment.

"I came back into the hall and he was still waiting. He started it all over again. I let him have it again. I thought all the time he would hop on me and break my neck. I can't understand yet why he didn't. Except, of course, that I don't think he was in his right mind.

"The fact that I slapped him doesn't prove anything. If Jack Dempsey came up to me, hit me in the chin and laid me on the floor, that wouldn't prove that Jack Dempsey won the argument—that Jack Dempsey, if you put it that way, has more intelligence than I have."

Dreiser then went home and forgot about it, he said.

OSTRICH GROWERS ELATED

Oudtshoorn, South Africa, center of the once prosperous ostrich raising industry, is rejoicing over the order placed by a leading Paris dressmaker for several thousand pounds of feathers, the largest order received by the local cooperative society since the World war. The order is believed to indicate the popularization of ostrich feather trimmings for women's garments which will lead to at least a partial revival of the feather industry just when ostrich skin for purses and other articles is going out.

How one of the famous designs of Poiret, the first artist among men milliners in Paris, was the work of a peasant girl, was recently revealed by a French girl who got the story from him. Poiret is said to have confessed that he was at a loss for a design for embroidery on a special dress. Calling a maid-of-all-work from the country he locked her in a room with pots of various paints and told her he wanted a design of flowers at once. In a few hours she had produced a design which surpassed all his highest expectations.

STOCKS SLUMP SATURDAY UPON PROFIT TAKING

New York (UP)—Week-end profit-taking reduced prices of stocks fractions to 3 points Saturday. Trading was dull after a fairly brisk opening.

According to preliminary calculation the Dow, Jones and Co., industrial average declined 2.03 points to 155.69 and the railroad average .08 point to 100.72.

Sales totaled 1,313,197 shares, compared with 1,109,410 shares last Saturday.

A few issues moved ahead. The outstanding feature in this group was Auburn Auto which came near its high of the year. Near the close the issue crossed 216, against a previous close of 209½. Its high for 1931 was 217½, made a few weeks ago.

General Motors made a new high for the year at 48 but failed to hold at that level. Other motors were fractionally lower.

U. S. Steel dipped more than a point, but recovered part of the loss. Other steels were mixed with Vanadium up nearly 2 points and Bethlehem down more than a point. Youngstown district operations were reported unchanged at 51 per cent of capacity, but this was offset by an increase of $2 a ton in prices of plates, shapes and bars by Illinois Steel company.

The general run of industrial issues moved lower. Losses of fractions to nearly 3 points were sustained by Westinghouse Electric, A. M. Byers, American Can, and Allied Chemical. Woolworth and Sears Roebuck reacted in the mercantile division.

Widest declines were made in several issues where dividends were said to face reduction or elimination. In this group U. S. Industrial Alcohol shot down more than 4 points and losses ranging to 4 points were sustained by Air Reduction and Liquid Carbonic.

Selling of the industrial alcohol shares also was furthered by decision of the treasury department to permit sale as industrial alcohol of high-proof spirits made in distilleries for use in fortification of medicines. Release of this alcohol was expected to be in direct competition with the established industrial alcohol companies.

Utilities lost fractions to more than a point. North American made a swift recovery in the last few minutes, closing at 87¾, off ⅛. American and Foreign Power closed at 46 5-8, off 1, American Telephone 194¾, off ¾, and Consolidated Gas 107⅛, off 1¼.

Amusements made fractional declines and closed lower. Coppers were down with Anaconda which lost one point to 38¾ for the day. Rails lost fractionally. Building stocks failed to profit by estimates of March construction so far being ahead of the 1930 period.

Westinghouse Electric broke 4 points to close at 91 on an analysis showing earnings for the first quarter down and incoming orders falling off.

CHARGES OF CRUELTY FILED BY CHAPLAIN

er said he smuggled in a reply from the woman.

The minister said he had no grievances against Warden Hill and that he believed a serious mistake would be made if any change in administration were ordered.

Employes in the prison frequently antagonized the convicts by unreasonable punishment, the witness asserted. He told of seeing a prisoner who had worried after hearing his children were ill, thrown into solitary confinement for pouring coffee on his bread.

"While I believe solitary confinement is necessary, I believe that in most instances an offending prisoner is kept in it too long," he said.

The chaining up of a prisoner's hands while in solitary confinement was described by Whitmeyer as too severe a practice.

The primary cause of unrest among the prisoners has been the methods of the parole board, Whitmeyer said.

Many prisoners have been deprived of leniency, he asserted, because of their refusal or inability to help the authorities solve other crimes and bring about the apprehension of other prisoners.

Investigations constantly being made in the prison by such outside organizations as the Chicago association of commerce, "Secret Six" committee in an effort to obtain "inside" information, are further cause of unrest, Whitmeyer contended.

FARMING SEASON GETS EARLY START

Washington (UP)—The agriculture season is getting under way early this year, but there are many uncertainties both as to production and prices.

Some eastern and central areas where last summer's drought was so serious have found the small amount of rain, or snow, disquieting, and unless heavy spring rains come there may be a recurrence of difficulties this summer.

Prices of farm products, in general, are below the 1910-14 level, with some basic commodities almost going begging for buyers. Three background factors, namely, existing large stocks of wheat and cotton, the industrial depression, and the general world-wide decline in prices of all commodities, are over-shadowing the beginning of the season.

On the financial position of wheat and cotton turns the fortune of a large group of the farm population. Any substantial increase in consumption of cotton, as well as of many other farm products, depends upon the resumption of industrial activity. Well-informed observers are now very conservative in their forecasts of the business situation, although general opinion seems to favor some improvement by the latter part of the year.

There is little information available as to the probable world wheat acreage for the 1931-32 crop year. It is much too early to forecast yields, but no serious damage to winter wheat has yet been reported and, should abandonment and yields be equal to the average, supplies for the coming year will again be large.

WHEAT PRICES ARE UNSETTLED SESSION DULL

Chicago, (UP) — A dull session on the board of trade Saturday saw wheat and corn moved narrowly in an unsettled trade. Small advances on weekend evening up were quickly lost on selling due to the continued precipitation in the wheat areas. Wheat closed about steady. Corn trade was largely local and averaged lower. Operators are awaiting some new incentive to take a stand eithr way. Oats showed good strength and resisted pressure, finishing firm.

At the close old wheat was unchanged to ¼c higher, new wheat was ¼c lower, corn was ¼ to ⅝c lower and oats were ⅛ to ¼c higher. Provisions were firm.

Cash prizes were wheat unchanged, corn unchanged to ½c higher and oats ¼ to ½c higher.

Receipts were wheat 93 cars, 96 and oats 12.

Chicago (AP)—Influenced by Liverpool reports that European continental countries would be obliged to modify tariff barriers and to purchase quantities of foreign wheat for mixing purposes, grain prices displayed firmness early Saturday. There were also predictions of reduced wheat acreage in Australia. Opening a shade lower to ⅛ cent higher, wheat afterward rose a little more. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ off and subsequently scored slight upturns.

REFERENDUM ON BUTTER BILL

Reports reach Salem that a move is afoot in the north end of Marion county, particularly in the Mt. Angel district, to invoke the referendum on the butter grading act of the 1931 legislature.

Dairymen were divided in their opinions on the measure while it was in the legislature. Many members of the Mt. Angel group, it is said here, believe that the law, when it becomes effective, will be a handicap rather than an aid to the creameries, the smaller ones in particular. Some of the smaller ones are suspicious that the big establishments of the state are back of the bill for the purpose of putting the little ones out of business. Others attribute the butter grading act to the oleomargarine interests.

Dairymen who do not like the law have been sounding sentiment during the last week to determine whether the opposition is strong enough to invoke the referendum. Although the referendum might not be successful it is pointed out that the fact that the move would delay the effective date of the act would be of some benefit.

Standards fixed by the act it is declared do not conform to federal standards, with the result that all butter must be graded twice, once by a grader employed by the creamery turning out the butter and a second time by the federal grader.

CAR OF MISSING POST OFFICIAL FOUND

the shortage which was indicated by a preliminary audit of the postal accounts on Friday. Peacock was bonded for $6,000 but reports are that the shortage may have exceeded that amount.

Peacock disappeared on the morning of the day that postal inspectors arrived to make their annual audit.

ENNOR CAPTURES STEALERS OF AUTO

Ralph C. Ennor, bookkeeper at the United States National bank, took into his own hands the matter of chasing down a trio of thieves who stole his automobile Friday and started south with it. In fact they went as far south as Jefferson where they were overtaken by Ennor and two friends and brought back to town along with the car.

The boys, all of whom gave Seattle addresses, first gave their names to the police as Chris Heidman, 14, Howard Wells, 17, and Chester Madden, 15. Later Heidman changed his name to John Hanley.

The boys told the officers that they stole a car in Seattle Thursday night and drove to Salem, arriving here Friday. They abandoned their stolen car here and appropriated another one which happened to belong to Ennor, who lives at 2495 Laurel avenue. Ennor immediately gave chase.

The boys were held at the police station and later turned over to the juvenile court.

BLOOD PROOF OF PARENTAGE

Positive proof of parentage based on the laws of colloid chemistry has been found, according to Prof. Wilhelm Zangemiester, of Konigsberg university, Germany. He relies on reaction between minute particles in the blood serum of the child and the supposed parent to confirm the relationship. Prof. Zangemeister believes some specific colloidal substance is handed on by the parent to the child, and that the substance may betray its presence in test tubes filled with the serums if a powerful light be shot through them.

SEND WARNING ON CURES FOR HOP MILDEW

With all bulletins stating that the downy mildew on the hops usually puts in its first appearance in late March or early April, hopgrowers are watching for the advent of the pest which last year attacked numerous hop yards in the valley for the first time.

Growers are warned in an English bulletin against using spurius remedies early in the spring, the bulletin stating that the winter spores are thick walled resistant cells and there is not a probability of these being killed in the soil by treating with any chemical. The bulletin says that growers should follow a system recommended of removing the spikes and spraying later in the season, when the vines are in certain condition. Home-made bordeaux mixture is the only spray recommended.

The first appearance of downy mildew in the spring is said to be in the shape of pale green or silver grey spike-like shoots coming out of the crown of the hill of a normal young green vine. These produce black masses of spores and pale yellow also later affects the growing vine when it is from five to seven feet high.

The English bulletin recommends that a gang of men go through the yard, spike pulling from the first appearance of the downy mildew. If the spikes are left in the yard a week or more the risk of spreading the infection is said to be great. Spraying with bordeaux mixture should follow later.

DOUBLE BARRELED ASSAULT BATTERY

A sort of double-barreled assault and battery case was pending Saturday in the justice courts of Salem and Silverton.

In Justice of the Peace Hayden's court Caroline P. Schmaltz, Edgar Stewart, Doe Lane and Clayton Thomas are charged by Reuben DeJardin with assault and battery against himself. While the case was being given a preliminary study by the authorities here the four defendants went to Silverton and awore to an assault and battery case against DeJardin in the court of Justice of the Peace P. L. Brown.

The case grows out of a divorce that separated Mrs. Schmaltz and her husband. The children were awarded to Schmaltz but have been staying with DeJardin, it was said, and going to school. A misunderstanding relative to family affairs is said to have precipitated the trouble resulting in the two charges.

GOOD WINTER FOR STOCKMEN ASSERTS LYTLE

A trip through the range district of eastern Oregon proves that the winter just ending dealt kindly with the stockmen, says W. H. Lytle, state veterinarian. No storm loss has been reported.

"Bumper lamb crops are reported from those engaged in shed lambing," Lytle reports. "A better distribution of lambing operations are being carried out. Those sheep owners who live in the high altitude country and near the desert have wintered out and have cut their feed costs to practically nothing. Of necessity they will resort to range lambing which will further cut their costs.

"The discontinuance of shed or winter lambing by many of the interior growers, will cut down the surplus, as range lambing does not permit of the saving of so many twin lambs. The shed lambing operator must mark out upwards of 95 per cent of lambs to be able to stay in the business while the range lamber can survive on 80 per cent. The sheep grower does not regard the present surplus as especially harmful to his industry as cheap lamb has been the means of creating an appetite for lamb and prime mutton.

"The cattle man has fared better than the sheep man the past year. The early calf crop has been promising and drenching rains in eastern Oregon recently have helped the feed situation.

"The stock grower sees where the present cheap grain prices will benefit his industry as it will force many grain growers to go back to horses. Each tractor, truck or automobile that displaces the horse releases just so much land for competitive stock and farm production. When horses were exclusively used for farm motor power one-fourth of the total farm acreage was used for the purpose of raising horse feed. Much of this land when released was used for increased live stock production, particularly sheep on the pastures of the middle west. If we go back to horse power, it will be difficult to get enough animals to supply the market. As for our eastern Oregon range product most of them are too small and besides more than 100,000 range horses have been turned into chicken feed and export horse meat at North Portland.

"Hogs have made the grower and the packer both considerable money. If too many people do not go into the business hogs should still remain profitable.

"The health of Oregon live stock was never better. Sheep scab has now been kept out of Oregon for the past six years."

BUTTER SCORE

Mt. Angel—Ten thousand pounds of butter were scored at the Mt. Angel Cooperative creamery by J. E. Draper, of the United States department of agriculture. The sweet cream butter scored 92 points and better, putting it in the "extra" grade. The sour cream butter scored 90 and better. Draper will come to Mt. Angel three times a week to score butter.

MARKET ROAD PROGRAM FOR YEAR PLANNED

It has been learned that the county court the coming summer plans to do two important market road jobs, one on the road between Woodburn and Hubbard paralleling the Southern Pacific tracks and the other to start completion of the Mission bottom road from the top of the Hopmere hill at the end of the present pavement down into the bottom past the T. B. Jones place and on over to link up with the old Champoeg road.

Surveys with be undertaken on both of these projects within a short time, the first survey probably to be made on the more difficult job of the Mission bottom road. A distance of about six miles intervenes between the end of the pavement and the connection at the Champoeg road and it is likely not more than three miles of this improvement will be put through during the coming summer.

The stretch from Woodburn to Hubbard covers a distance of about four miles and will probably be all completed the coming summer. The survey there will be easy as will most of the road work which follows much in a tangent on an easy grade alongside the Southern Pacific. The work will be most of the way a matter of bringing the present county road up to a market road standard. However, quite a material change will be made in relocation for about 200 yards entering Hubbard and some right of way matters are to be straightened out there as the road will be entirely new for this distance.

The Mission bottom road is one frequently traveled by Salem people and is considered an important country road. This road also leads to the stub road which leads into the Wheatland ferry but the Wheatland stub is not contemplated as part of the improvement.

WOOL MARKET GROWS BRIGHTER

Portland (UP) — Improvement is noted in sentiment all through the wool trade. While there is no business to speak of in sight locally owing to the delayed shearing season, buyers are keeping their eyes open for posssible bargains at the opening of the trade.

Demand for scoured and woolen wools is increasing quite rapidly which gives great encouragement to the local situation, even though no business is now showing. Such offerings as eastern Oregon and Washington as well as the panhandle of Idaho have, reflect the best part of the demand. The same applies also the the Boise valley district, where recently sales have been made around 14-15c pound.

Present indications point to fine wools of eastern Oregon and Washington opening at a spread of 13 to 15c. It would not be at all surprising if the extreme figure ruled at the start. Fifteen cents appears to be the popular top price offered in the Pacific Northwest. In the Willamette valley medium wools are nominally placed 15c pound, with coarse 12c pound.

Now that there is a definite change in wool trade from worsteds to scoured and woolen wools, much machinery throughout the country which has been idle for about two years will begin to turn.

John Nesbit, of Fort Smith, Ark., has a pair of horseshoes which won first prize at the state fair in 1880. He made them.
