Business was "poor" with the U. S. employment bureau during the past week with Sim Phillips, manager, receiving only 96 registrations, 49 calls for help and 33 replies of placements. Common labor and wood labor tied for first place in registrations, each having 20. Fifteen of the former and ten of the latter were in demand with 13 laborers placed and seven of the woodmen. Demand for farm hands exceeded the supply, ten being wanted and eight available, of whom five were placed. Two of the six salesmen found work. There were no calls for four carpenters, four kitchen workers or three cooks. Seven of the 14 housekeepers were placed with calls for twelve. The one chambermaid registered was in demand and placed. There were no calls for the five women cooks.

Stock in the old Oregon Lumber Mills continued to be deposited Monday in exchange for stock in the proposed new concern and Harold Eakin, vice-president of the First National bank who is handling the transaction, states there seems to be a certainty that more than plenty of the stock will be in by April 23, the date set for the stockholders' committee meeting.

Circuit Judge Siegmund took a drive Sunday through the Blackfoot section in the delta formed by the junction of the Santiam and Willamette rivers. This section saw some very high water, this year caused by flood conditions in both rivers and Judge Siegmund states there is plenty of evidence of the high water level where fences have been washed away and on some farms where piles of drift have been left. The judge stated that a number of farms were highly benefited by sitting in on the land, but others perhaps, were more damaged by drift and debris than they were benefited by the draining of silt. Driven back through the Talbot country, he stated the roads there were only slightly damaged in places by the water where small washes were observable here and there mostly at the sides of the roads.

While the April term of circuit court has progressed a week since being convened there has been no meeting yet of the long session grand jury which was brought into being last November. The grand jury adjourned several weeks ago subject to the call of the foreman or clerk. It is stated there are some criminal matters which could be brought before the grand jury and cases of men in jail which might be called to its attention if it were brought together, but most of these will probably be disposed of by criminal information if the grand jury does not meet during this term. The matter of the validity of the grand jury is being brought to test in the case of Rhea Luper, former state engineer, under indictment for larceny of public money. Luper has filed a motion to have his case dismissed based on alleged invalidity of the grand jury itself.

The estate of H. G. Sprague has been appraised at $500 in a report in probate filed by G. I. Barr, Ed R. Adams and Clay Allen.

The New York Alumni club of Willamette university met recently at the Village Kitchen, according to information received here. Samuel R. King, Joe Meyer, Frank D. Leamer, Gerald Pearson, Curtis Reid, Daryl Chain and Kenneth McGormick were the members in attendance. Out-of-town visitors included Victor D. Carlson of Boston and Wendell M. Keck.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo "Frisco" Edwards have returned to Salem after a motor trip to California. While in San Francisco the Edwards attended three of the baseball games played between Portland and San Francisco. Edwards is of the opinion that the Beavers will have a real club this year if they can strengthen their pitching staff. There is nothing wrong with their batting, he states.

President C. G. Doney, Dean F. M. Erickson and Prof. C. B. Laughlin, all of Willamette university, are attending the conference of Higher Education for the Pacific Northwest which is being held Monday and Tuesday at Eugene under the auspices of the U. S. Bureau of Education and the University of Oregon. President Doney presided at the conference Monday while Dean Erickson is scheduled to lead the discussion Tuesday on "Improvement of College Teaching."

A total of 3336 persons visited at the state prison Sunday, in connection with Blossom day, according to actual count. This figure is somewhat under that of a year ago due to the rainy weather. Eight hundred and twenty-eight automobiles were parked in front of the prison during the day.

The high school associated student body is in excellent financial shape, with $1253.47 balance on hand April 2, according to the March financial report. Receipts during March totaled $242.45, with $930 in the treasury (total $112.99) on the March 31. Disbursements for the month: $120.00 from basketball; a total of $301.19 was paid out during March, with the following sums: general, $121.00; field, $57; annual, $1; Clifton, $14.50; debate, $35.20; basketball, $37.95; football, $12.50; play, $2.25; swimming, $11; bank, $4.20.

George Hug, city school superintendent, was back at his desk Monday morning following a week's absence during which he attended the annual meetings of the Inland Empire Education association and the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools. Hug is president of the latter organization, and has one more year to serve in that office. The latter association did some important business during the meeting, accrediting several higher schools and re-appointing Pacific Northwest an accredited school, authorizing research and publicity directors and reporting on a standard school library survey. The standing committee of the association will meet in Seattle the latter part of May.

Dr. C. G. Brosman, head of the history department at the University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho, will come to Salem sometime in May as the guest of George Hug, city school superintendent, who met him in Spokane last week, where Dr. Brosman was on the program for the annual session of the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools, of which Hug is president. Dr. Brosman is an authority on Jason Lee and Oregon history, and will make an address here that will contain some surprising facts, according to Hug. Incidentally, it will be Dr. Brosman's first trip to the Willamette valley.

High school seniors held a special meeting Monday to make arrangements for advertising their class play, "The Show-Off," which will be presented at the high school Friday night. Prizes were offered for students selling the most tickets.

The high school interclass track meet will be held at Sweetland field Tuesday after school.

The regular high school assembly will be held on Wednesday this week, instead of the customary Thursday. Additional activities scheduled for high school students during the week are: Tuesday, Girls League, Radio club, Boys' Glee club, Clarion annual business staff meeting; Thursday, Latin club, Girls' Numerical club; Friday, Girls' Glee club and chemistry division of Science club.

The following Salem teachers have been named for various offices in the Salem Teachers' Association by the nominating committee: President, Mary Eyre and Beatrice Skeen; first vice-president, Ann Bonjette and Vivian Carr; second vice-president, Ola Clark and Herma Pfeiffer; third vice-president, Dorothy Baugherty and Ruth Goodrich; secretary, Grace Hendrickson and Cecilia Mielke; financial secretary, F. O. Bradshaw and Sylvia Paulson; treasurer, Ermine Pawk and Betty Broadbent; press correspondent, Mabel Dotson and Martha Jean Dixon. Elections will be held at an early meeting.

An athletic field for women only is the goal of members of the Willamette women's athletic association. Conference on the part of the women with Dr. C. G. Doney, Coach "Spec" Keene and Coach Echo Baldersee have been held. No objections have been met so far against the girls spending about $25 to improve the open space among the trees behind Chreste cottage and the music hall. Final plans, according to association members, include an inch of grass over the entire field, three volleyball courts, an archery field and a baseball diamond.

NEW CONTRACT FOR HUG TO BE BEFORE BOARD

The threatened shake-up in the city school administration will fail to materialize at the school board meeting Tuesday night, according to excellent authority. There seems to be no doubt that the school board will offer to renew Superintendent George Hug's contract, although the exact length of term to be specified in the offer is not known. Hug has served as city superintendent for 11 years, but his last contract was only for a two-year period. It is understood that Hug will be offered a new contract at Tuesday's meeting or at the next session.

The school board Tuesday night also will expect to reply to R. W. Tavenner, supervisor of secondary schools, who through the superintendent requested that board members consider his contract in order that he might reply definitely to a flattering offer from an eastern Oregon school. Tavenner is not asking for an increase in salary, but with funds paid by Willamette university for supervising student teachers, his salary will come close to the salary proffered by the eastern Oregon school. The question was laid on the table at the last school board meeting.

Fred Wolf, high school principal, automatically comes under the teacher tenure law, having held his position here for two years. For teachers under the tenure law, under which the Salem school system comes for the first time this year, recommendations from the school superintendent are unnecessary as are contract, the teacher being automatically hired year after year and being subject to dismissal only on the filing of charges and a hearing that results unfavorably to the teacher. The school board's new law has sent out contracts this year as in past years, that it made a definite check on teachers planning to return to the local school system next fall.

The tenure law, while relieving the board of much responsibility in the hiring and firing of teachers, also has its drawbacks to the teachers, for dismissal under the law is a detriment to the teacher's reputation.

The main problem facing the Salem school board Tuesday night, following the tacit understanding that the question of any change in the school administration has dropped, will be the question: "Where are we going to get some money to run the schools on?" The school system already is running on 1929 taxes being collected this spring. The 1930 taxes are not due until May 5 and preliminary tax payments to the county sheriff's office have been slow.

CONTEST FOR AFTER DINNER SPEAKERS

A contest which is entirely new to Salem and probably to the entire state will be held here next Friday evening under the auspices of the Oregon Forensic League. It is called the "After Dinner Speakers' contest."

Representatives from the University of Oregon, Oregon State Agricultural college, Pacific university, Albany college, Pacific college, Linfield, Monmouth, Normal and Willamette universities will meet at 6 o'clock Friday evening for dinner. Roy Hewitt, dean of Willamette university's law school will act as toastmaster and will call upon the various students for extemporaneous talks. None of those who speak will know in advance the subject upon which he will be asked to talk.

It is believed the contest will be of interest to those who are called upon to make after dinner talks. Men and women are invited to attend the contest. Those expecting to attend should phone the restaurant before Friday noon for reservations.

Maureen Dean will represent Willamette university in the contest.

Lane Hi Schools Figure on Closing

Two or three high schools in Lane county contemplate closing their doors next year and transferring their pupils to other high schools. It was learned Monday in an opinion returned by the county general auditor, distribution of funds in the event they are closed. The opinion was requested by C. A. Howard, state superintendent of public instruction. The funds, the opinion holds, will be apportioned according to attendance in the high schools maintained.

A new portable stage which can be taken down and stored when not in use was installed in Highland school during the week-end. This addition to the equipment of the school will be used for entertainments of various descriptions.

Brief, simple and very impressive were the quiet services held Monday at 1 o'clock in the sixth grade room at McKinley school, when a fine colored picture given the classroom by Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Downs in memory of their son, Robert Downs, was dedicated. Robert, a student in the class, died last year. The assembly opened with the singing of the Oregon state song. Douglas McKay, Jr., read a tribute to his former classmate. The picture, entitled "The Oregon Trail" and painted by Robert Wesley Amick, was unveiled during a silent interval. The ceremony closed with the repetition of the Oregon creed by students in the sixth grade.

A small flurry in measles is noticeable throughout the county, according to Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer. The increase is expected at this time of the year. Parents are advised to see that their children receive no additional infections from colds, etc. The situation is not alarming.

Improvement Districts Proposed For Salem For Ornamental Lighting

Growing out of the movement started about two years ago for the ornamental lighting of High street from Trade Center, a proposed amendment to the city charter has been prepared and will be placed before the city council, and later, before the people, whereby the formation of improvement districts in Salem can be authorized.

It is planned to place the measure on the ballot at the next special or regular election. If it is approved by the people it is indicated that the first projects to come under it will be the ornamental lighting of High and Liberty streets in the business district. Whether this would be done by the authorization of a single or by separate improvement districts would be determined later.

Salem is said to be one of comparatively few cities in the United States having no authorization for the creation of improvement districts. As the charter amendment is planned the formation of a district would be authorized by the city council when 51 or more percent of the property owners immediately adjoining or abutting on the proposed district petitioned the city council for it. The limits, of course, would be determined by the number of property owners desiring the improvement. The initiative in the movement for a district would be with the people and not the council. The council would authorize it by ordinance upon receipt of the petition. This would be mandatory upon the council.

A district could be formed for a purpose, and the purpose for which it was formed, as stated in the city ordinance. After creation of the district the property within the district would be bonded to raise funds to carry out the project mentioned in the ordinance, and the bonds could not be used for any other purpose. While the bonds would be sold by the city they would not be general obligation bonds, but would have back of them as their security the resources of the district.

The amendment is being prepared by Lars R. Bergqvist, attorney for the High Street improvement association. This organization was back of the movement of about two years ago to light High street with ornamental standards at the expense of the business houses along the street. It was found, however, that this would have placed too heavy a burden upon individuals.

The association has already been responsible for some notable improvements on that street, including the fill between Division and Belmont, the culvert in that district, and paving of the street to a width of 99 feet.

The type of light to be used on the street, if the charter amendment is carried to completion, will be determined later. They will be of modern design, it is said, and scientifically designed with respect to quantity of light needed in the district.

VOLLEYBALL TEAM PLAYS FOR TITLE

The majority of the members of the first and second Salem V. M. C. A. volleyball teams will leave here next Friday in automobiles for New Westminister, B. C., where they will participate Saturday in the Northwest championships. Champion teams from seven districts in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia will compete. The two teams from Oregon will be the Salem squad, champions of the state, and Portland, runner-up.

Those expecting to make the trip include: first team—Dr. L. E. Barrick, captain, Nile Hilburn, Keith Brown, Lloyd Gregg, Elmore Hill and Paul Acton; second team—Bryman Boase, Bob Elstrom, O. P. West, G. P. Page, captain, Floyd Mason and Schenck.

Salem and Portland played practice games Saturday night, each squad taking three of the contests.

LUMBER INTERESTS WARNED BY MEIER

Portland (P)—Lumber interests Monday were contemplating the warning given by Governor Julius Meier before the Oregon industrial safety conference here Saturday night, that logging accidents are "far too numerous."

The governor pointed out that over a four-year period the logging industry paid premiums totaling $1,641,971 to the state accident fund, but that $2,289,212 in claims were taken from the fund, leaving a deficit for the industry of $647,241.

Meier before the Oregon industrial safety conference here Saturday night, that logging accidents are "far too numerous."

"If benefits are to be raised and the rates of premiums remain stationary, the hazard must be cut down, otherwise benefits must be cut down or the rates must go up," the governor said.

Government pictures of South African life and a short descriptive talk on that country will be featured Monday night at 7:30 o'clock in the First Christian church. Dr. Jesse R. Kellens, who spent two years in Africa as an evangelist and missionary, and who also is engaged in some big game hunting while there, will be the speaker. He will also preach on the topic, "What Must I Do To Be Lost?" The evangelistic meetings will continue throughout the week. Tuesday night an orchestra and large delegation from Silverton are expected to attend. Delegations from Corvallis, Albany and Dallas are expected on other nights this week. During the county campaign so far there have been about a hundred additions to the memberships of the county Christian churches, directly as the result of the evangelistic work of the Kellens party.

MEIER WEAKENS ON PURCHASES

After some weeks of experience with the routine details of purchasing minor supplies and materials for the state departments and institutions, necessitating meetings of the board of control two and three times a week, Governor Meier weakened somewhat in his insistence that all requests be passed upon by the board before purchases are made at Monday's meeting.

The concession came during the consideration of a long list of "confirmatory orders" for petty purchases, most of them by the agricultural college, the governor's own institution.

"How far is this confirming order policy you insisted upon going to go, governor?" asked Hal Hoas, secretary of state.

"What do you mean by confirming orders?" asked Meier. "You requested at an earlier meeting of the board that nothing be purchased by any department or institution without first coming before the board," Hoas said. "So far as my department is concerned I have been trying to live up to that policy. Only last week it cost us considerable money when we had a crew of girls tied up with nothing to do because we couldn't buy a supply of envelopes until the board met again. Now comes this bunch of confirming orders for articles already purchased by the college."

"How far is this policy to go, and is it going to apply to all emergency purchases for all departments?" Hoas asked. "Any time you have anything to buy in an emergency go ahead and buy it—it is O. K. with me," said the governor.

30 SALEM STUDENTS AT PORTLAND MEET

Thirty Salem high school boys, students in the vocational education shops, attended the organization meeting of the Future Craftsmen of Oregon, held at Portland Friday and Saturday. Wendell Cross of Salem was elected organization secretary, and the Salem group was appointed to make all arrangements for the 1932 conference, which probably will be held in Portland.

Other officers named were R. D. Murray of Portland, president; Louie McNeil of Bend, vice-president; Edwin Gardner of Roseburg, treasurer; and Dale Elliott of The Dalles, sergeant-at-arms. The Future Craftsmen of Oregon was organized by O. D. Adams, state supervisor for vocational education, as a connecting organization among vocational education students throughout the Oregon high schools. Local organizations will be formed, the Salem boys planning to organize their unit sometime this week. The organization is patterned after the Future Farmers of America, agricultural students union which has representative groups in 36 states. The Future Craftsmen of Oregon is the first organization of its type to be founded in the United States.

ROSEDALE BOOKS DONATED TO SCHOOL

Desire to put into operation the free textbook plan authorized by the recent session of the state legislature, at the earliest opportunity has resulted in a canvass of the Rosedale school district in which all the owners of school books agree to relinquish title of them to the district at the close of the current term next month. This was the sense of a report which reached County School Superintendent Fulkerson Monday.

The people of the district believe that in this way the district will acquire sufficient books so that perhaps only a part of the $150 per capita authorized for expenditure each year until the district is completely equipped, will be needed, and that only for replacement of books which have become obsolete or worn out.

A number of patrons, it was said, had intended to sell their old books to the district, but realized that the small amount of money they received for second hand volumes would have to be paid right out again in district taxes, and that in the paying it might shrink considerably.

"The people of Rosedale are to be commended for their foresight in thus effecting a speedy operation of the free textbook plan," Mrs. Fulkerson said. "They were the first district in the state to take this action, and I believe that they have set a fine example for other districts to follow."

A request from Western Reserve university for Willamette graduates who wish to continue and study for their master's degree, has been received by Dr. Carl G. Doney, president of Willamette. Catherine Barker and Esther Lisle are two graduates of Willamette who have accepted this offer in the past. The understanding is that the students do social service work in return for money with which to pay their way.
