HOOVER ASKS FOR VETS' HELP IN CRISIS

maintain the stability of the United States.

Without mentioning specifically bonus and pension proposals advocated by many in the Legion, Mr. Hoover, after referring to depression relief aid given by the Legion, said:

"But there is today an even greater service to our country. That is the determined opposition by you to additional demands upon the nation until we have won this war against world depression. • • • Nothing would give a greater glow of confidence to our country today than your enlistment and the vigorous support you can bring to this effort to prevent additional burden on the government from any quarter whatsoever."

Mr. Hoover emphasized the gravity of the situation further.

"The imperative moment has come when increases in government expenditures must be avoided, whether it be ill considered, hasty, or uninformed legislation of any kind, or whether it be for new services meritorious in themselves," he said.

"We can carry our present expenditures without jeopardizing national stability. We can carry no more without grave risks."

Mr. Hoover did not refer to the British crisis and the announcement Monday of the suspension of the gold standard at London, but it was evident he was profoundly concerned.

"The first stone in the foundation of stability and recovery, both at home and in the world, is the stability of the government of the United States," Mr. Hoover said. "It is my purpose to maintain that stability and I invite you to enlist in that fight."

Citing the prospect of another large deficit, Mr. Hoover warned that either loans or taxes "beyond the very minimum necessities of government will drain the resources of industry and commerce and in turn will increase unemployment."

Mr. Hoover urged that "no one be misled by those who say it is only necessary to tax the rich."

"We must face the absolute fact that the rich can be taxed to the point of diminishing returns and still the deficit in our ordinary and necessary expenditures would not be covered even upon a basis of utmost economy," he said. In the end, he warned, "it is those who would be forced 'to work in the fields, at the bench and desk who would be forced to carry an added burden for every added cent to our expenditures."

As Mr. Hoover turned to leave the platform a shout of "we want beer!" rose from the gallery. The cry spread throughout the hall in a tremendous roar. Mr. Hoover, who was smilingly shaking hands on the platform, moving toward the door at the same time, appeared to take no notice of the beer cry.

Mr. Hoover's speech required 13 minutes to deliver.

Thousands lined the concourse and streets surrounding the union station to welcome the president and his party. Other thousands lined the streets enroute to the Olympia convention hall. There was no loud demonstrations until Mr. Hoover took the platform to begin his speech when legionnaires rose and cheered.

Ralph T. O'Neill, national commander of the legion, introduced the president.

Two national radio networks carried the speech to the nation.

The colorful audience frequently interrupted the president with loud applause, first as he declared united action would permit America to lead the world to economic recovery, and again as he accepted the offer of the legion to cooperate in nation wide recovery.

Altogether the president was in the auditorium less than 20 minutes, 15 of which he was speaking.

Before Mr. Hoover arrived Newton D. Baker, war time secretary, appealed to the legion members to display the same "reckless courage" they revealed in the war in solving the problems of the present age.

Europe, Mr. Baker said, is pining for security and living in grave anxiety lest another war start within the next few years. The United States, he declared, is the only nation "big enough and brave enough" to say to the world that "we not only demand peace, we intend to have it."

A telegram from General John J. Pershing, which was read to the convention, also called upon the legion to meet present day problems in the same spirit shown in the war.

The telegram asserted that "America must lead the way back to prosperity," and expressed the belief that the legion members "can win the battle of today against depression and discontent."

MORGAN HOPEFUL OF BRITISH ACTION

cussed the situation for almost an hour and while it is not permitted to vote him any further than above, it may be said that in the entire discussion he did not express any pessimism.

And he added a word of fine tribute for the character and stability of the English people.

Several other financiers expressed similar opinions. Without exception, they held the view that the government's latest step is in the right direction and that Britain will weather her crisis.

There was no disposition to try to evade the fact that the situation is very serious.

Indeed, one of the most hopeful signs these financial experts find is that England does not recognize the situation is serious and is attacking her problem from that standpoint.

Other financial commentators requested that their names be withheld but here are some of the points made by several American bankers, all of whom are widely known:

Suspension of the gold standard by Great Britain not only was not unexpected, but it was a logical and foregone conclusion.

From the standpoint of the financial expert it was the correct move.

The only criticism offered is that it should have been done before.

Far from being disconcerting this move has cleared the atmosphere.

What has happened is that England, as a banker, has stopped a run on her institution. People all over the world were cashing their British securities here in London. Individuals did not realize the magnitude of the operations and did not recognize that they really were participating in a run, financial competitors say.

But it was apparent to London and the government stepped in and stopped cashing securities in gold while there still were gold reserves enough to meet the government's needs.

Britain was not going to let herself get caught as Germany did just after the war when the mark crumbled to practically nothing because Germany's reserves had been wiped out, financial experts declare. The fall in the dollar value of the pound has been anticipated and discounted by bankers, it is said.

One effect of the suspension of the gold standard will be to cut down imports. This also has been discounted since it has been assumed England must impose tariffs anyway.

JAPS TAKE MORE CITIES IN MANCHURIA

Kanchengtse, near Changchun, the terminus of the South Manchurian railway, other important cities of Manchuria remained in the military grip of the empire. The Nanking foreign office instructed Alfred Sze, its chief delegate to the League of Nations, to lay China's case before the League council.

Tokyo (LP) — Japanese airplanes dropped bombs on 50 Chinese troop coaches sidetracked at Shimminfu, 35 miles east of Mukden, according to official advices received Monday.

The attack was the first of several other bombing expeditions the Japanese were expected to make on Chinese troop concentrations.

The reports were followed by renewed objections of Baron Shidehara, minister of foreign affairs, to the war ministry's proposal to dispatch a mixed brigade of soldiers to Manchuria.

Tokio (LP)—The Japanese cabinet was in session here Monday, hoping to be able to announce a definite date for the evacuation of occupied Chinese territory.

Continued reports of disorders, however, made it appear doubtful if a date could be named. Clashes continued in the Chientao section, according to advices received here, and Korean military reinforcements were dispatcher to the scene.

The foreign office announced receipt of the second protest from the Chinese government, in which alleged aggressions by Japanese troops were given in detail and which charged Japan with destruction of the Mukden arsenal.

Meanwhile the government admitted it was unable to issue a statement to allay foreign opinion since it still was unable to control movement of the army.

A dispatch to the Nippon Dempo news agency from Changchun, China, said the second Japanese division was ordered to prepare for an advance toward Kirin, scene of heavy fighting during the first day of the Mukden disturbance.

BRITAIN SUSPENDS GOLD PAYMENTS

verpool cotton shot up sharply as did metals in London. In Bombay silver and cotton prices advanced. Liverpool wheat rose 4 cents a bushel.

Bankers in New York held hurried conferences to check the first effects of the British decision which they anticipated beause of general lack of knowledge of the situation.

Leading bankers in New York did not believe the situation serious so far as this country was concerned. America, according to an influential banker, has only about $50,000,000 credit in England aside from the recent loans to the Bank of England which are payable in American gold dollars. This amount is of no consequence as compared with the huge short term credits of America in Germany, he said.

Brokers and bankers in New York anticipated the move and made preparations for it last week. The stock market in New York declined sharply last week as traders discounted effects of a temporary suspension of the gold standard.

The situation means that for the time being England will suspend payments within the British Empire on the gold parity fixed in 1925 when the gold standard was resumed after a suspension during the World war.

Government obligations in foreign contracted on a gold basis will be met at the gold rate when they fall due.

According to a leading American banker the effects of the move will be more marked in England than anywhere else "with the certain degree of inflation that is likely to ensue," he said, "even though limited in extent, the tendency of price will be to rise. This may result in a temporary increase of business activity there, although wages probably will be held down."

The present crisis came about through heavy withdrawals of foreign credits from the bank of England. The official statement issued by the British government suspending the gold standard states these withdrawals amounted to around $1,000,000,000.

Paris (LP)—Prices on the Bourse were around the lows at the close Monday.

Gold rose 10 annas (about 20 cents) per tola (seven pennyweights.)

The government ordered banks and markets throughout India to remain closed Tuesday. The viceroy issued an ordinance temporarily relieving the government of its obligations under the currency act to sell gold sterling.

Liverpool (LP)—Cotton and wheat prices soared Monday with the fall in value of the pound sterling. Cotton rose $4 a bale while wheat rose from 3 to 4 cents a bushel.

Hamburg, Germany (LP) — The bourse was closed indefinitely Monday.

Paris (LP)—Thousands of English on vacation on the Riviera were embarrassed Monday by the refusal of banks to cash their English checks.
