The New Wood Burning . . .

Washington Super Furnace

Scientifically Built To Standard Specifications For Double Heat Capacity

More heat from less fuel. Due to the extra large double ribbed combustion chamber the heat is held in the room instead of escaping up the chimney.

DOUBLE RIBBED LONG LIFE CAST IRON HEATING UNIT

The heating unit is extra heavy, extra thick, and double ribbed inside and outside, and further strengthened to prevent warping or cracking. It has been pre-posely built extra heavy to withstand heating firing and hard service.

CIRCULATING HEAT

There are no hot spots and cold corners with a Washington Furnace. The air is in constant circulation, warm air currents flowing away from the furnace, cold air drawing to it for re-heating.

LARGE FEED DOOR

Overize feed doors are a feature of all Washington Furnaces—particularly the wood burning models.

HOLDS FIRE OVERNIGHT

Draft doors and registers are machine ground and fitted air tight permitting absolute control of under drafts when holding fire.
